YCC needs six youths for Back Bay program

Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge will be conducting a Youth Conservation Corps (YCC) program for this summer. This program will commence on June 23, 1986, and run for eight weeks ending on August 15, 1986. Six enrollees, three boys and three girls, will be hired for this program.

YCC enrollees will be required to provide their own transportation to and from the refuge. Work hours will be from 7:00 a.m. - 3:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. Salary will be approximately $3.43/hr. Some of the projects planned for this year's YCC enrollees include, searching for sea turtle crawls, constructing several environmental education study sites, erecting sand fence, building and grounds maintenance, repairing existing board walks and more. To apply for a position enrollees must: Be at least 15 years of age, and not have reached 19 years of age during the term of employment. Be a permanent resident of the United States or its territories or possessions. Have a social security number, or have made application to obtain one. Have a desire to work in the outdoors and become involved in the development and maintenance of the Nation's natural resources. Be able to obtain parental or legal guardian consent to enroll in the program. Be able to provide proper type and amount of work clothing. For example, long sleeve shirts, jeans, work boots, etc. Applications can be requested by either calling 2, or picking them up in person at the refuge headquarters located at 4005 Sandpiper Rd., Virginia Beach, Va. Applications must be returned to Back Bay NWR, P.O. Box 6286, Virginia Beach, VA 23456, no later than April 15th. See YCC, page 3

Paintings displayed at City hall

Watercolor paintings on silk by Virginia Beach artist Shaw-mei Shen will be on view April 1 through 30 at the Municipal Center Gallery, a satellite space for art sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center. The gallery is located on the second floor, corridor of the Virginia Beach City Administration Building at North Landing Road and Courthouse Drive. Hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free and open to the public.

Shaw-mei Shen, born in China, studied with the great Chinese art masters, as well as in Taiwan and American universities. Her work is a rare mixture of classic Chinese imagery and contemporary watercolor style. Each work is delicately rendered on silk with careful intent to depict the most subtle colors, shapes and forms of nature.

The eight paintings on view are celebratory visions of nature, including many traditional Chinese themes. Shaw-mei Shen's work has been featured in several one-woman shows throughout the country and in the Orient.

In a review of her work in The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star, writer Robert Trotter said, "If a single word were used to describe Shaw-mei Shen's art it would have to be grace. Her art is designed with rare skill and is subtly crafted to bring us squarely into focus with the beauty of nature. Yet, it leaves ample room for the imagination."

Paintings by Shaw-mei Shen will be on view at the Municipal Center Gallery through April 30. For further information, contact the Virginia Beach Arts Center at 425-0000.

Beach kick-boxer ranked third in world

Bush on the move!

Virginia Beach pro kick-boxer Curtis Bush has been ranked number three in the world according to the current issue of Official Karate Magazine. The world rating by the Star-System is the basis of ranking by the World Karate Association and the Kick Organization. Bush, is ranked in the Welterweight division with a fight record of 22-3 with 15 knock-outs.

Silver Print Photos at Humana

A collection of photographs by Tidewater Community College art students will be on view April 1 through 30 at the Humana Gallery, a satellite space for art sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center. The gallery is located in the dining area of Bayside Hospital at 800 Independence Blvd. Hours are Monday through Saturday from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission is free and open to the public.

The silver print photographs are all studies of light and shadow as it affects a particular subject, whether it be a building facade, still life, or a traditional environmental study. These works attempt to "see beyond" actual objects and concentrate on the formal issues of composition, light and form. Some of the students achieve this through abstraction, while others are more traditional in orientation. Michael Goodwin, photography instructor at TCC, describes these works as "exceptional for beginning students." Works by students Kim Anderson, Joyce P. Avery, Jackie Bacho, Donna Lacy, Claudia Martin, Janet Yarbrough Meyer, Anne White and Peter White are featured.

Also, drawings and graphics by Norfolk artist Ed Carson will be on exhibit at Westminster-Centerbury, a condominium on Shore Drive, and the Arts Center's latest satellite gallery. The exhibit opens March 31 and continues through April 30. Westminster-Centerbury will be open during most daytime hours to residents, visitors and their guests. For more information, call the VBAC at 425-0000.

DAR Chapter meets, elects officers

The Lynnhaven Parish Chapter, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, will meet on Saturday, April 12, at 10 a.m. at the home of Mrs. Harvey Williams 637 East Lynn Shores Circle. Mrs. William J. Seullion, Jr. will be co-hostess.

William Bittner, Officer-in-Charge, Norfolk Office, Naturalization and Immigration Service, will be guest speaker. Chapter officers for 1986-1989 will be elected at this meeting. Mrs. Eugene T. Connors and Mrs. Rice M. Youell will report on actions taken at the Virginia DAR State Conference held in Richmond in March. At this conference it was announced that Jarrett Thayer Williams of Thalia Elementary School had tied for first place at the state level in the fifth grade American History Scholarship. Both students were sponsored by Lynnhaven Parish Chapter.

Antique show/sale at mall

The merchants of Lynnhaven Mall will sponsor an antique show and sale beginning April 2 through April 5.

Forty exhibitors from 13 states (Kentucky, Delaware, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Mississippi, Florida, North Carolina, Maryland, Illinois, South Carolina, Texas) will display their rare and various antiques. All displays will be for sale. Among the exhibitors will be specialists in American, English and Continental furniture, primitives, art glass, cut and engraved crystal, Orientalia, fine American and European porcelain, American art pottery, early watches, comics, sports items, rare and out-of-print books, movie posters, antique advertising, quilts, antique lace and linens, and early tools.

This event is coordinated by Jack Hatfield Promotions.

Resort city celebrates Arbor Day

The City of Virginia Beach will hold its public observance of Arbor Day on Friday, April 4, at 10 a.m.

The public tree planting ceremony will be held this year on the steps of the Old Princess Anne Courthouse on North Landing Road.

Arbor Day is a national observance which promotes tree planting and celebrates the beauty and usefulness of trees. During the Arbor Day ceremonies at the Municipal Center, the city will be presented with its sixth consecutive "Tree City USA" award. Mayor Harold Heischberger and other city officials will join in planting a Zelkova tree to commemorate this day.

Displays

In addition to the city officials, the Virginia Beach Beautification Commission and the Council of Garden Clubs are participating. There will be plantings by several groups around the city as well as an Arbor-Day display at Pembroke Mall.

Activities at Pembroke Mall run from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. "Smoky Bear" will make an appearance from 7 to 8:30 p.m. A plant clinic will be held by the Master Gardeners of Virginia of the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture and will be assisted ed by Extension Agents, Randy Jackson, and Greg Lonergan and City Arborist Roger Huff.

Soil samples will be accepted and landscape questions answered. Free pine and green ash seedlings, donated by the Union-Camp Corporation will be distributed throughout the day as will scrape myrtle seeds. This display will be conducted by the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/V.P.I. Extension Services and 4-H clubs. Free tree seedlings will be distributed at several public schools throughout the city.

History

Arbor Day was first observed in Nebraska in 1872. It was conceived by J. Sterling Morton, then a member of the State Board of Agriculture and later United States Secretary of Agriculture. At a meeting of the State Board of Agriculture of Nebraska in 1872, he introduced a resolution to the effect that a date in April would be set aside each year and consecrated to tree planting. On the first Arbor Day in Nebraska, more than one million trees were planted. Today, Arbor Day is celebrated worldwide.

Citizens of Virginia Beach can participate in Arbor Day by attending the various festivities or by simply planting a tree at their residence. Most holidays or observances look to the past, but Arbor Day lets us look ahead by planting trees for future generations.

Green Line impact report released

A growth impact analysis for the Green Line area of Virginia Beach has recently been released by the City's Planning Department.

This report, which was prepared by Harland Bartholomew & Associates, identifies and explains the major factors to be considered in any decisions involving the Green Line. The Green Line is a land use policy line south of which City Council will not rezone land for urban use.

Copies of this report are located in reference departments of all city libraries, including the Municipal Reference Library at the Municipal Center.

Call the Planning Department at 427-4621 for more information.

VWC play opens April 4

"The Importance of Being Earnest," Virginia Wesleyan College's spring play opens April 4 in Hofheimer Theater. Rehearsing, from left, are Virginia Beach residents, Mary Christine Danner, Keith Bertoline, and Leslie Quinn. Performances will be at 8 p.m. on April 4, 5, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, and 2 p.m. on April 6. Tickets are $3. Reservations should be made by calling the college switchboard at 461-3232. (Photo by Mike Anderson)

Boardwalk has wheelchair ramp

To enable handicapped persons access to the ocean, the city of Virginia Beach has a wheelchair ramp located at the boardwalk of 17th Street. Completed one year ago, this ramp makes it possible for the disabled residents and tourists to enjoy the beach area. Call the Mayor's Office, 427-4581 for information.

The perils of presidential offspring

What a chore, and a bore, to be one of the first children. As a toddler, you will be photographed in various states of terminal cuteness, crawling and underneath Daddy's desk in the Oval Office or bursting in on a cabinet meeting. In awkward pre-pubesence, you will set tongues a-clucking over the latticework of the braces on your teeth. And in the flower of young womanhood or manhood, you can expect to hear similar snickering over your dates.

If you are already an adult while Daddy is in the White House — as in the present case — you will confront three basic choices: You can struggle mightily (and probably futilely) to escape the glare of public curiosity; make some uneasy accommodation with it; or capitalize upon it.

The children of Ronald and Nancy Reagan seem more or less to have seized the last option. Ron, 27, erstwhile college dropout and ballet dancer, is writing for Playboy when he isn't cavorting in undershorts and shades on NBC television's "Saturday Night Live"; it's doubtful he would be doing either if his name were Ron Smith.

Ron's sister, Pattie Davis, who has enjoyed underwhelming success as an actress and singer, has written a semi-autobiographical novel about (you guessed it) the daughter of a president. Maureen, a feminist, has grabbed headlines by disagreeing with her father on women's issues; likewise her brother Michael, by his peevish comments about stepmother Nancy.

One pays attention to the Reaglets and other first children not because of their trenchant observations on life, or their talents, such as they are, but because of their derivative celebrity. In this regard they are much like first ladies, who also have no status of their own but acquire it by being married to it. The catch, as the writer Katha Pollitt has observed, is that "we live in a society where borrowed status is frowned upon when people are made to think about it, and the more one tries to use it, the more useless it becomes."

Try to tell that to Ron Reagan. When last heard from, he was courting movie offers. "Bedtime for Bonzo: The Sequel," perhaps?

Those left behind

Some see the release of Anatoly Shcharansky as a harbinger of a more liberal human-rights policy in the Soviet Union. But the Jewish activist, who did eight hard years in the Soviet gulag, knows better.

"The usual practice for the Soviet authorities, whenever they make a concession, is to follow it up with repression against those who could take advantage of it," he said several days ago. "I'm afraid that my release can be used to tighten up on" others.

Mr. Shcharansky knows whereof he speaks. From the time he was imprisoned in 1978 on trumped-up charges of treason, espionage and anti-state agitation, he saw Soviet authorities tighten the screws of repression on so-called troublemakers.

Some of his cell mates included a Soviet teenager jailed for advocating a purer form of Marxism, a Latvian arrested in the Baltic republics, a Roman Catholic priest condemned for teaching religion to children and a man sentenced to seven years for protesting the exile of Andrei Sakharov.

Mr. Shcharansky strove for a measure of solidarity with the other prisoners as he tried to counteract the terrible isolation of being cut off from his value system. And he was punished for speaking out and writing letters on behalf of fellow prisoners who were sick and in need of medical attention.

All told, Mr. Shcharansky spent more than 400 days in solidarity confinement for such offenses. While there, he was forbidden to lie down during the day, and at night a wood-and-metal board was put in his cell for sleeping. His menu consisted of black bread one day and a tepid gruel the following day. This regimen went on for as long as 90 days at a time. To preserve his sanity he sang songs, recited psalms from memory, concentrated on his religious faith and analyzed chess positions in his mind.

Mr. Shcharansky was able to withstand this mental torture through sheer force of will. But many of his fellow prisoners were not so fortunate. He speaks movingly of the screams that often punctuated the stillness of sub-zero Siberian nights.

Would that Mr. Shcharansky's grim testimony serve as a constant reminder of the thousands who still languish in the Soviet gulag.

Lisicki wins logo contest

Ten-year-old Cashel Lisicki of Virginia Beach smiles as she shows off the t-shirt design that won the Pizza Hut Run for the children design logo contest. The shirt will be given to pre-registered runners in the April 12 races in Norfolk. Proceeds will benefit the Children's Hospital of the Kings Daughters in Norfolk. Also pictured is co-winner, Kevin Gilkes of Norfolk.

Halley's comet leaves legacy behind

With Halley's comet heading back to the cold depths of space, the comet's passage has proven exciting and scientifically successful. Astronomers have obtained measurements of the comet from the ground and spacecraft that will take years to analyze. Millions of people have braved cold nights and early morning dark hours to have a look at this, the most famous of comets.

On March 13, the spacecraft Giotto traveled to the center of Halley's comet to measure and photograph the nucleus, the one part of a comet that had never been seen before. The spacecraft was knocked askew by a cloud of dust particles as it reached its closest approach to the nucleus, but not before sending back a series of dramatic closeup pictures. The spacecraft's radio signal was reacquired about 25 minutes later by the Parkes radio telescope in Australia, showing that Giotto survived its pummeling by the comet's dust. The photographs, which showed a black nucleus of two and one-half miles by nine miles, confirmed the "dirty snowball" theory that the comet consists mainly of ice and dust.

The comet was sighted about a week after its very close swing behind the sun in early February perhaps a little brighter than predicted. As it swung out to the west of the sun in the early morning sky, it was very easy to see in the southern hemisphere. The tail appeared short but conspicuous to the naked eye, about half a degree or so in length, making a V-shaped smudge in the sky behind the apparent nucleus. In 7 X 50 binoculars, a tail of about two degrees was easily seen. The tail has since lengthened by several degrees.

The comet is now moving westward and southward across the sky, and is located south of the constellation of Sagittarius. In April it will pass below Scor-

Motorcycles and mopeds

By Heidi Keller

Mopeds and small motorcycles have become a popular mode of transportation these days in Portsmouth.

Having had a 70-CC Honda Passport motorcycle for several years and recently selling it, I found from talking to potential buyers that there are a lot of misconceptions about the differences between motorcycles and mopeds.

First, a moped has pedals and a motorcycle does not. It is not necessary to get a motorcycle license for mopeds, while a person must have one to drive a motorcycle. It is also required by law to wear a helmet when driving a motorcycle and is advised to do so with a moped.

Both seem to have one thing in common. Because they don't go all that fast and they are somewhat easy to control after getting used to them, riders tend to get a bit careless about driving them, myself included. But realizing their limitations is the key to safety.

Another similarity is that mopeds and motorcycles must follow the same rules of the road as any other motorized vehicle. But one soon finds out that 18-wheelers are the king of the road on the highways and to avoid them at all costs.

I was excited when I got my Passport as a present from my father on my 21st birthday because I didn't have a car and I felt that I now had a dependable and speedy source of transportation. But being older and a little bit more sensible, I now shudder when I recall the road trips I took on my little scooter.

My first was when I carried my 11-year-old little sister and a huge overnight duffel bag to visit my father, a 50-mile trip which took us about three hours.

Our maximum speed during the trip was 45 m.p.h., down hills, with the average speed being about 35 m.p.h. over the hilly terrain. I had been advised to ride in the middle of the road, in plain sight of the other motorists, but often had to pull over to allow backed-up traffic to pass us on the one-lane road.

The trip was hairy to say the least, but what made it particularly uncomfortable was that my helmet was too big and the wind beating against it would swirl inside causing such drag and pressure around my neck that I pulled over several more times when the pressure got too great.

The highlight of the trip was when a police officer's sirens and flashing lights escorted us to the side of the road, for no other reason, but to get a good laugh. The officer was simply amazed at the sight of us travelers, acting as if we were crazy.

Needless to say, although our father was glad to see us, neither of us took the trip again.

I really appreciated that little motorcycle, which got about 100 miles to the gallon. It never failed me when I needed it for transportation.

But too often, I took chances driving it, on occasion without a helmet or without the suggested attire. It was just on those occasions that I would lose control of the darn thing by not holding on to it on hot, summer days and wind up with cuts and bruises, which left me with permanent scars and none the wiser.

So, now it is in the hands of another youngster, who hopefully will take better care driving it than I. Driving in Portsmouth seems to be particularly dangerous because motorists' driving skills are as varied as the places the people come from.

For extra insurance, I would suggest that motorcycle and moped riders take advantage of the classes for improving rider skills through the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV), not only to increase the riders' safety but in some cases to obtain discounts on motorcycle insurance.

Teachers share 'good ideas' at conference

By Gary Blumenstein, president, Virginia Beach Education Association

Four VBEA teachers attend workshop

Most members of the teaching profession are constantly on the look-out for new instructional ideas, different classroom procedures and more effective strategies to improve student motivation and performance. Additionally, teachers are ready and willing to share their personal experiences and successes in these areas.

This was the underlying theme of a Spring Instructional Conference which is held in Blacksburg on March 13, 14 and 15. This conference, sponsored by the Virginia Education Association, carried the theme of 'Good Ideas' and featured classroom teachers from across the state as workshop leaders. The purpose was to share their experiences and successes with interested colleagues, also from all parts of the state, who were eager to learn more to help them teach the children.

Four Virginia Beach teachers, who certainly exemplify this eagerness, represented the Virginia Beach Education Association at this workshop.

Those who attended were: Joyce Whitmore (Cooke); Ellen MacCarone (Kempsville High); Betty Holmes (Kingston); and, Donna Urbanas (Princess Anne High).

All four teachers shared positive feelings about the conference and came away with helpful experiences and materials. Mrs. Whitmore felt that the presenters did an outstanding job in bringing new and innovative ideas to the participants. She attended a session in which they learned how to long for oysters. This was an example of learning by doing and can be used in science classes. "I left feeling so proud of my colleagues," stated Miss MacCarone. She continued; The workshop presenters shared 'Good Ideas' (which) came from their actual classroom experiences, the fruit of daring to try a new approach of teaching, classroom management, student evaluation and the other stuff of day-to-day education.

Miss Urbanas' main feeling was one of camaraderie. "So often, we as teachers feel that we are operating in a vacuum, that we are alone, facing problems in our classrooms which are either unique or unsolvable, or both."

Former Virginia Teacher of the Year and keynote speaker, Gaye Adegbalola was one of the highlights for Mrs. Holmes. Her address dealt with 'Education in the Year 2000 (A Satirical Utopia)'. Another highlight was Julia Thomason of Appalachian State College whose speaking topic was 'Ideas Filter Up, Ethics Filter Down.'

Twenty-three concurrent sessions were held on topics ranging from 'Motivation-The Key to Positive Learning' to 'Math Motivation Through Music' to 'My Students Decide Their Grades-It Works'. What these four eager teachers did in Blacksburg is what teachers are doing everywhere, every chance they get; evenings, Saturdays and summers.

In the face of critics who talk about the 'summers teachers have off,' statistics show that 44 percent of Virginia's teachers take summer courses (to keep their skills sharp and their certificate current), 48 percent work at other jobs (in order to be able to afford to teach) and 32 percent do volunteer work in the community. Many do more than one of each of these. When you see a teacher scurrying out of school at 3:50 or 4:00, chances are that he or she is heading for a curriculum-in-service or a late afternoon class or is going home to get dinner ready before hurrying to an evening class. Even beyond that, the 'normal' work week for an average Virginia teacher is 51 hours.

Continual self-improvement to do a better job for our children is paying off. Virginia Beach continues to be recognized as one of the leading school systems in the state, as well as 'in the nation.'

Retention rates are down sharply in the Beach from over nine percent in 1984-85 to almost six percent in 1984-85, even in the face of stiffening academic standards that are required to graduate. SATs across the state are above the national average and in the Beach, in 1983-84, they were 10 points above the national average, 13 above the state average and 42 points above the Southern Region average. One of the significant contributing factors to this success, according to Superintendent Brickell, is a 'strong teacher corp.' Such a strong corp does not just happen. Virginia Beach teachers go where they have to go, when they have to and do what they have to, to get 'new ideas.'

The United Teaching Profession works year-round, and tirelessly, to provide the workshops and material that teachers need and want to help them to do a better job. Thank you Joyce, Ellen, Betty and Donna for your time, leadership, and interest.

Be cautious

Listen up for emergencies

Fire Safety

By Martin Grube
Master Fire Fighter

The weather outside is freezing so your car windows are rolled up tightly. You have your AM-FM stereo on moderate to high volume and your thinking about what you're going to eat for dinner when you get home. You look up into your rear view mirror and you see a shiny white fire truck with their red lights flashing. Well, they probably have been following you for quite a while if you shut yourself into your automobile like that.

Virginia State Law (46.1.225) requires that upon the approach of an emergency vehicle you are to pull over to the right hand side of the road and allow them to pass.

You should always leave your car window cracked slightly so you can hear emergency vehicles. That's why it's also good not to play your radio so loud that the people in Cleveland can hear it!

If you haven't noticed by now Virginia Beach Police vehicles have changed to blue emergency lights and the Rescue Squad has white and red emergency lights. The Fire Department stayed with red emergency lights.

If you see an emergency vehicle responding to a call, pull over to the right hand side of the road to give them the right of way. Do not stop suddenly in front of a fire truck, because its hard to stop three tons of metal and water.

REMEMBER: YIELD to your Virginia Beach Professional Firefighters for they will appreciate it.

Instruct your children not to run out into the street to get a better look at the trucks as they pass, sometimes there is another fire truck close behind. If your children want to see a fire truck, bring them to any fire station in Virginia Beach and ask for a tour.

On war and painting

The art of war has a dual meaning to Virginia Beach resident Marine Colonel Edward M. Condra III. While studying the art of war as a professional soldier, "Condra has also been recording the art of war as one of the Corps' most prolific artists."

A portion of his wide pictorial coverage of Marine Corps activities has been put on display at a special exhibition at the Hampton Roads Naval Museum, through May 15.

The exhibition, entitled "Images of a Combat Artist," features 50 drawings and paintings created by Col. Condra, and the senior active duty Marine officer to have served as a combat artist. Most of the artworks on display reflect his wartime observations and visual impressions of the people and passing scenes in Vietnam and Lebanon.

"Combat art," say Condra, "is the 'closeups' of war by artists who lived the periods of calm and the hours of fiery combat with the men who fought on the beaches, in the skies and on the oceans. Their weapons have been the brush, pen, oil, watercolor, charcoal and chalk."

To Condra, the combat artist's efforts are of far greater significance than mere pictorial reporting. They have become unique documents of world history, and many are today major works of art.

"The term 'combat art' applies equally to the activities of the preparation for combat and the prevention of warfare, as it does to that art depicting the battle itself," stated the Marine artist. "So, too, are the moments of calm and reflection of pain and dedication equally recorded."

According to the veteran combat artist, were it not for such paintings and drawings, millions of people might never have had the opportunity to "share a moment of tedium in the lives of our military, or ascend with them to the brief plateaus of pure courage whereby men and equipment perform deeds immortalized by their sheer magnificence."

Born in Honolulu, Hawaii, Condra received his undergraduate study in graphic and advertising design at the University of New Mexico, The Art Center College of Design in Los Angeles, and the Philadelphia College of Art. Condra is a graduate of various military schools and holds a Master of Science Degree from Boston University.

A former Marine Corps sergeant, Condra was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1960. His various duty assignments have taken him through much of the Far East and Europe. As a result, many of his paintings reflect Marines serving around the globe at sea and ashore.

As a combat artist, his pictorial coverage of Marines and the wars in Vietnam and Lebanon has been reproduced in numerous publications and widely exhibited to include the Smithsonian Institution. More than 100 of his works form a prominent part of the permanent Marine Corps art collection. Today his drawings and paintings of widely diversified subject matter and style are found in many private collections.

Colonel Condra served two combat tours in Southeast Asia as an engineer officer and unit commander. He also has completed assignments as the public affairs officer for Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, and Fleet Marine Force, Pacific. He is currently serving as the senior Marine officer on the staff of the Commander, Naval Surface Forces, Atlantic, here in Norfolk. Col. Condra resides in Virginia Beach with his wife, Linda, and their two children, Bryan 19, and Amy 17.

Former officers open neighborhood hardware store

Eddie Briggs and Kevin Curling, both Chesapeake natives, and both former Juvenile Probation Officers for the City of Chesapeake, have put away their badges and opened Cedar Road Hardware. Eddie served 12 years with the Juvenile and Domestic Court, is an Oscar Smith graduate, and received his degree from Averett College. He and his wife, Cathy (Kevin's sister) have two children, and live in Great Bridge. Kevin, a Great Bridge High graduate, received his degree from Virginia Wesleyan College and served four years as a Juvenile Probation officer. He and his wife, Donna, also live in Great Bridge. Cedar Road Hardware has over 10,000 square feet of sales area, with another 2500 square feet for storage. Sentriv, a nationwide hardware buying cooperative, has given their new store an immediate identity, says Eddie. "We don't sell packages of screws here," he says. "We sell them one at a time or by the bulk. We're a general hardware store. We'll sell you one pound of seed, or a ton. Everyone gets the same attention." Cedar Road Hardware is located just past the City Municipal Center on Cedar Road.

Many faces of South tied to land, heroes

By Charles Kuralt

(Third in a weekly series.)

This Southerner we've been talking about, the one who enjoys another's company so much, is not a mountain man. The mountain people are more reticent with strangers. They're really the same people, the same old Scotch-Irish stock, so that insularity must be a reflection of the landscape. Hills and hollows, no horizons.

Land is not the only determinant. Within a mile of each other, in the Low country of South Carolina, you'll find a plantation owner and a black Geechee woman. Two more different individuals do not exist on the earth.

But certain people tend to be proud because of the land they live on. The South Carolinian, for example—not just the Charlestonian and an aristocrat, but the South Carolinian in general—is more conscious of history. And the Virginian, of course, is the one who is so family and history proud. That comes from having all those great men like Jefferson and Madison and Washington to reflect on.

Most of these people are related in some way to somebody—they had an uncle who was judge in the courthouse that Jefferson was the architect of, or some other tenuous connection to the past. Most of the rest of the South doesn't have anywhere near so much to be proud of. We have plenty of history, but not of that nation-building kind.

History is something that becomes important to you as a Southerner mainly if it's something that happened to your Uncle Bob. But we've had our fair share of big events, and, as they always do, these events produced great heroes. At the time he was elected, surely Andrew Jackson was the greatest hero to come out of the South. Today the word "revolutionary" is tossed around too much; every new gadget is revolutionary. But Jackson's Presidency was as close to being revolutionary as any we have had. His was the first genuinely popular election. He was really elected by the people, and it was looked upon as the triumph of the people over the narrow group of aristocrats who had run things before.

There was a streak of demagogue in him, and when he challenged the Supreme Court he really meant it: "The hell with you guys, I'm the President now." I have a portrait of Jackson on the time, painted by some anonymous admirer of his. It shows him in the robes of a Roman emperor, with his hand on the globe, and he's standing beside an arch. This was uncharacteristic Jackson, but it was the way people thought of him—as a kind of demigod, a Southern Caesar.

But Robert E. Lee was the first one to be a purely Southern hero. I knew all about the exploits of Lee, and Stonewall Jackson, and J.E.B. Stuart, and Nathan Bedford Forrest.

I don't believe too many people think of Lee as a hero in the South anymore—unless you

South down, to keep the heel of the boot on the South. We as a nation treated Japan far better than the North treated the South after the war.

The situation would have been better if Lincoln had live, of course. His wisdom was so wide, and his compassion for the South had made itself felt since the middle of the war. But a great leader was pretty hard to come by right after the war, and that is what the country obviously needed—a great, healing leader with a magnanimous spirit. Lincoln had that, and was ready to try to bring us together.

I think the day has finally come—and maybe it's just as well—when the South's heroes are the heroes of everyone else.

The mule, once a familiar sight in Southeastern Virginia farmlands, is shown doing his job in this 40-year-old scene.

go back to the places where he lived and still is revered. I'm not sure the South has many historical heroes today. The old folks may, but I don't believe the new generation of Southerners thinks much about where we came from.

There are plenty of wretched stories that came out of the Civil War, as well as plenty of examples of kindness to the enemy. But the great bitterness came after the defeat, when it became apparent that many Northerners were determined to grind the think most Southerners would now acknowledge that Lincoln was one of our greatest Presidents. That bitterness of the past is mostly gone, except in remote pockets.

I'll tell you who became a hero in the South, in my memory: Franklin Roosevelt. He's the hero I remember. He wasn't FDR, or "the President." He was Roosevelt; there was only one. I don't remember any criticism of him at all. People had no faith in any of his

What to do until the doctor comes

Your recent column suggested using Othanoi and Milky Spore to eliminate moles, but there's another way to stop these rascals! I don't want to use any more chemicals than necessary, due to the fact my yard is a virtual bird sanctuary. Also, will these remedies harm my pet terriers? Mrs. Cathrill, Great Bridge.

A: There are other choices to consider for mole control.

1. Go directly after the mole with poison peanuts, poison gas, or castor bean seeds which are also poisonous — care should be taken to put any of these products directly in the mole's runway to keep away from pets.
2. Diazinon is a chemical which will kill the mole's food supply, (insects) thus the mole leaves.
3. The old-fashion mole trap is still available at garden centers and hardware stores in Tidewater. This and Milky Spore are not toxic to the environment.

early stage. Should I prune them into a single trunk? Will these weaken the overall structure of the tree? Also, is the Silver Maple a good choice for shade and protection? I'll change them now if not, John Butt, Chesapeake

A. Silver Maple is one of the fastest growing shade trees. However, be aware of septic and water lines because their roots will seek out moisture. Also, their roots tend to come above ground and sprout new trees. At the age of your trees, it would be better to top them to strengthen their bark. Only prune Maples in July and August.

I'm glad your column represents three experts because I'm planning on landscaping my own newly constructed home. I've bought a book on the subject, but am basically lost. What is a juniper, really? I've visited several nurseries, only to be shown a different looking shrub each time. I want junipers, but not the trees. A low-growing bush, that will complement my hollies, which I intend to hedge into oval shapes. Mrs. A. Landston Oliver, Suffolk.

Juniper is a group of plants that have small needle-like leaves, that grow into various shapes with leaves that can be green to blue depending on a particular variety. All varieties are evergreen, prefer full sun, hot and dry conditions. All varieties seem to do well in Tidewater with few problems. (Red Spider Mites are the primary insect to spray for). Because of their low maintenance and hardiness, more than 20 new varieties have been introduced in the past few years. For your particular needs, I would recommend Andorra Juniper which is a slow symmetrical shaped growing type with a spread of 30-36" and reaching a height of 12-16". Or for something taller knicks compacta Juniper will have a spread of 30-36" and a height of 30-36".

My yard is being overrun by weeds. It's very sandy, and I've re-seeded twice a year for years—but nothing really happens. Right now, the weeds are 4-5 inches high, and everyone has a different suggestion on what steps I should take. I've had lawn service companies try, to no avail. I want to start off the right way this year, without digging up my yard. Please, please tell me what to do! Hardee Shakel, Mt. Pleasant Rd.

A. I suspect you have been seeding with Ky 31 fescue and to have a thick lawn you must seed heavy. (7-10#/1,000 square ft.) Over seed annually (5-7#/1,000 square ft.) A general lawn program for Tidewater could be: April 10..... Weed and feed

May 1..... Seed
May 25..... Feed
August 15..... Crabgrass killer & Weed Killer
Sept. 1..... Overseed and feed
Oct. 1..... Feed
Nov. 1..... Feed
April 10..... Weed and feed
Keep in mind there are more desirable fescues on the market for Tidewater. (Galway, Falcon, Jaguar, Rebel, Astro, and Hounddog). These tend to be heat and drought tolerant for us. Seed (5-7#/1,000 square ft.) or overseed (3-5#/1,000 square ft.)

London Bridge comes to town

Lee Fentress, president of London Bridge Greenhouses & Nursery, takes a breather recently as he makes last minute preparations to open his new London Bridge Greenhouse and Garden Center in Chesapeake. The new facility has over 13,500 square feet of sales area, with three acres of inventory. In addition to the retail greenhouse, garden center and nursery, London Bridge will also have a full landscaping design department, along with a landscape irrigation division for the planning and installation of underground sprinklers—geared for both commercial and residential customers. And, just as its original facility in Virginia Beach, it will have a lawn maintenance department, offering everything from grass cutting to fertilization for the residential and commercial customer. Beth Cranshaw, a certified horticulturist, will be the manager of the new store located at 3925 Portsmouth Boulevard, at the corner of Dock Landing Rd., Jolliff and Taylor, near the Portsmouth border.

predecessors, and in Roosevelt they suddenly found someone to put all their faith in.

REA, WPA, CCC, and World War II; it just seemed that finally there was a President in office who cared about the common man. In a funny way, it was the same way they'd felt about Jackson. This fellow was a man of the people. It didn't matter where he'd come from or that he spoke with a different accent. He was on their side. He was there to help.

Things had gone terribly wrong after the Civil War, and it harmed the country for all the rest of that century and right up into the Great Depression. It took another war—World War II—to bring the South back.

The Southerner certainly suffered from an inferiority complex. He felt that opportunity existed in the North, not in the South; that the North was on top and the South was on the bottom. There's still a little bit of that feeling even today.

But we're mostly over it—and not least because so many Northerners have found the South so charming. The South now attracts Northerners like honey attracts flies. They go to Orlando, or Myrtle Beach, or New Orleans, or Charleston. And they sense this rare openness and friendliness; they can't get over it. They don't treat you on the Jersey Shore the way they treat you in Myrtle Beach. Northerners have discovered the South, and they love it.

When someone sits down in the year 2015 to write a book about the South, they won't have much of this to remember. Their South will be the South of interstate highways and big cities. There'll be no more mills with blue windows; instead, they'll see the quiet IBM complex out there in the country. Change is all around us even now; you can see it everywhere.

There are still enormous cotton farms in the Mississippi Delta where you can smell and feel the Old South. But today they're just as likely to be catfish farms where fish are fed by airplane.

You can't weep about what has happened to the South. Changes of heart have taken place. People who said "never" to the new ways are now admitting that the new ways are better.

Much poverty and sickness and ignorance have gone the way of yeoman farms and homemade country hams. We've lost some of the valuable things, too, of course, which is the price we pay. I predict that we'll adjust and hang on and make do, as Southerners always have done.

And that's why we—the South, the Southerner—will keep on surviving. We know how it's done.

Building, Princess Anne Courthouse, Virginia Beach, Virginia. A briefing session will be held at 9:00 a.m. in the Planning Department Conference Room, Operations Building. Planning Commission action is not a final determination of the application, but only a recommendation to the City Council as the viewpoint of the Planning Commission. Final determination of the application is to be made by City Council at a later date after public notice in a newspaper having general circulation within the city.

Those members of the public interested in attending the Public Hearing should be advised that, for reasons the Planning Commission deems appropriate, certain items on the agenda may be heard out of order and that it should not be assumed that the order listed below will be exactly followed during the Public Hearing.

The staff reviews of some or all of the items on this agenda suggest that certain conditions be attached to approval by City Council. However, it should not be assumed that those conditions constitute all the conditions that will ultimately be attached to the project. Staff agencies may impose further conditions and requirements during administration of applicable city ordinances.

VIRGINIA: In the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court for the City of Virginia Beach on the 25th Day of March, 1986

v.
Henry Doumar,
a/k/a Henry T. Doumar;
Vivian G. Doumar
Richard Doumar
Ronald Doumar

and Parties unknown, being more particularly described as the spouses, widows, widowers, heirs, devisees, personal representatives and successors in title, if any, of Henry Doumar, a/k/a Henry T. Doumar, Vivian G. Doumar, Richard Doumar and Ronald Doumar, the issue, if any, of Maurice Doumar, a/k/a Maurice Doumar, and of other persons who may have an interest in the property which is the subject matter of this cause, all of whom are made parties defendant by the general description of Parties Unknown, Defendants.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION
The object of the above-styled cause is to effect partition among the owners, by sale, allotment or otherwise, of the real property described as follows:

ALL THAT CERTAIN lot of land, with the improvements thereon, situated in the City of Virginia Beach (formerly Princess Anne County), State of Virginia, known, designated and numbered as Lot Number One (1) in Block Three (3); said lot having an aggregate frontage of 34.03 feet on the North side of 29th Street running back parallel to parallel lines 140 feet, as shown on that certain plat entitled "Map of Central Park, Inc., Va. Beach, Va.," dated May 31, 1926, made by J. M. Baldwin, C. E., which plat is duly recorded in the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach (formerly Princess Anne County), Virginia, in Map

LEGAL NOTICES

Book 8, at page 10; together with all right, title and interest, if any, in and to the unnamed lot twenty feet (20') in width adjacent to the northern line of the above-described property as shown on the aforesaid plat.

And it appearing from the Bill of Complaint and by the Affidavit duly filed: (1) that Henry Doumar, a/k/a Henry T. Doumar, is not a resident of the Commonwealth of Virginia; (2) that the last known address of Ronald Doumar is in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia; (3) that some of the potential defendants and their addresses are unknown, as shown in the caption of this Order of Publication; and (4) that some of the defendants may have died leaving heirs, devisees or personal representatives; all of whom are unknown and that there are or might be persons other than those named in the Bill of Complaint interested in the real estate to be disposed of in this suit whose names and post office addresses are unknown and who have been designated as "Parties Unknown" in the Bill of Complaint.

It is, therefore, ORDERED that the above-named parties, if living, and if dead, their heirs, devisees and personal representatives and if married, their respective consorts, and all persons other than these herein named, who are or might be interested in the real estate to be disposed of in this suit, whose names are unknown, and who are made defendants by the general description of "Parties Unknown," do appear on or before May 16, 1986, and do what is necessary to protect their interest. It is further ordered that the foregoing portion of this Order be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks in the Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper of general circulation in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia.

City conducts parenting classes

The City of Virginia Beach, Comprehensive Mental Health Services, is conducting a series of six weekly parenting classes based on Burton White's book, "The First Three Years." Mothers will take part in learning activities with their child, and be able to talk with other mothers and an early childhood specialist about child development and how it applies to their infant.

Mothers with babies from birth to 9 months old are welcome to join. The classes are scheduled for Fridays only, April 4-May 9, 9:30 a.m. - 10:30 a.m., at 1876 Wildwood Drive, Virginia Beach.

The cost of the series is $18. To register, or for further information, call Linda Eggleston at 481-4545.

Council to address civic league

The North Virginia Beach Civic League will meet on Thursday, April 10 at 7:30 p.m., in the library auditorium of the Association for Research and Enlightenment, 67th and Atlantic Avenue.

The City Council candidates will address the membership briefly on the issues of the campaign. A question and answer session will follow. All residents and property owners of North Virginia Beach are urged to attend.

Tidewater Coin Club meets

The Tidewater Coin Club will meet on Wednesday, April 9 at 7:45 p.m. in meeting room #5 at the Lake Wright Motel located at 6280 Northampton Blvd., near I-64, in Norfolk.

The speaker for the evening will be Chuck Fifield, who will talk on setting up an exhibit for the Coin & Stamp-A-Rama. An auction will also be held. Refreshments will be served. Visitors are welcome. For further information call 499-8872.

plus and then swing back northward as it slowly fades from view. A moon dimmed by a total eclipse on April 24 will perhaps give the last chance to have a decent view of the comet.

On March 20, the outbound comet crossed the earth's orbit. On April 1, the comet will be about 108 million miles from the sun and 50 million miles from the earth, moving away from the sun at about 59,000 miles per hour. The comet will be closest to the earth on April 11, when it will be about 39 million miles away; the comet will be brightest then but low in the sky and too close to the horizon for good views from Virginia. By April 20 the comet will have receded to 48 million miles from the sun, 136 million miles from the sun.

See you again in 75 years, Comet Halley?

Superstar competition

High School Students: Is your school Number 1? Find out by participating in the Virginia Beach High School Superstars Contest on Saturday, April 12.

Four-person teams will represent their Virginia Beach high schools and compete in eight sports for the superstar title. Trophies will be awarded to the first- and second-place team members, and to the winning school.

This event will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at the Kempsville Recreation Center. The cost is $12 per team, and each participant will receive a T-shirt.

Sponsors are the Department of Parks and Recreation, Starz Teen Club, and 97 STAR Radio.

Registration deadline is April 9. Call 495-1892 for details.

Women's free program set

A Returning Women's Network free program, "Women and Jobs: Upward Bound!" will be presented Thursday, April 17 at 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Campus of Tidewater Community College.

The program includes one woman's personal account on her quest for a career with lots of helpful information for women who want to take one step at a time through the re-entry phase, the job market experience and the career path. Guest speaker will be Joan Kruzicki, Probation and Parole Officer.

The lecture is free and will meet in the Kempsville Building, Room D-123. For information, call the Counseling Center at TCC, 427-7211.

Place of refuge

Ocean House celebrating its second anniversary

By Beatrice Kitchen
Special to The Virginia Beach Sun
This spring marks the two year anniversary of the opening of Ocean House - a place of refuge for persons with mental retardation and/or developmental disabilities. Its sponsor is the Department of Mental Retardation, of the City of Virginia Beach.

Supervised and administered through city agencies, it is the only home of its kind in the state, according to Tom Laidlaw, residential specialist. Tom is the program's supervisor and was well prepared for the sensitive challenge, having earned a Master's in Social Work from the University of Illinois. He has been a city employee for more than three years.

Ocean House is located near the beach and provides shelter during the summer, by the week, to those who are handicapped through mental retardation with developmental disabilities. It is this class of people who rarely have the option of living what we take for granted as a "normal" life with expected routines of scheduled work and vacation.

It is the person from this environment who needs desperately to experience the pleasures of a changing routine, such as an unfamiliar bus trip to a new destination, a visit to a museum or amusement park, or the thrill of watching - for the very first time - a brilliant sunrise bursting through the horizon and reflecting the promise of a new day on the ocean's waves.

And it is to this end - why Ocean House was born.

Special friends
Although used as a respite center during the winter months, for periods lasting from 24 hours to 30 days, it is the summer for periods lasting from 24 hours to 30 days, it is the summer months that bring our "special friends" to the home.

Under supervision of Ocean House Coordinator Juny Santo (and his wife, Brenda, who volunteers thousands of hours each year in her capacity as cook, housekeeper and friend to all who enter their door), people come to this home seeking a change from a life that too often stays the same, day after day.

"Some wonderful things happen here," said Tom Laidlaw. "Christmastime brings a flurry of cards from former residents."

And during their stay, the Santos make sure they find out who has birthdays and who need very special cakes. Juny Santo came to Ocean House with a background of experience in group homes for the mentally retarded and according to Tom, "they both have a gift for opening their hearts to extended family."

The guests are just that - guests! They are cared for as if they were guests in anyone's home, with no chore to mar this once-in-a-lifetime memory. They form friendships with others in their same situation, and correspondence and phone calls are a result of their new learned capacity for reaching out and establishing relationships.

Offered tremendous potential for growth in a new environment, even on this short term basis,

Woodhurst Civic League

Playing with poltergeist

By Julie Luke
Special to The Virginia Beach Sun
Rita B. Rawles, an independent business woman who moved to Virginia Beach fifteen years ago, is currently in the process of reorganizing the Woodhurst Civic League.

Rawles formed the league five years ago, but chose not to be president of it, leaving the position open to others. She was elected treasurer, but became active president of the league when the planning commission posted signs of a rezoning project in November, 1986.

Although the Virginia Beach Comprehensive Plan is to keep the Great Neck area zoned Residential, there is approximately 5.97 acres in the area zoned Business.

Boyd Construct Company, Virginia Beach, planned to develop the area when the Planning Commission approved it for apartments.

It was then that Rawles approached her civic league with petitions to protect the zoned area on the grounds that a cemetery dating to the 1800's existed within the project area.

Rawles spent days searching the city's archives for burial records relevant to the cemetery. (It took the union of her civic league with 20 other neighboring leagues to hire an attorney.)

City records indicate that the cemetery is actually a 24 foot plot containing six graves.

City Council denies CBN zoning reconsideration

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City Council has refused to reconsider an request of the Christian Broadcasting Network,

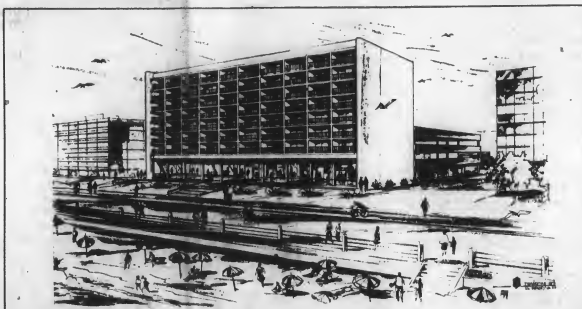

Inc. (CBN) to drop conditions attached to a rezoning approved by Council on June 15, 1981.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf, who made the motion not to reconsider the conditions, said that the conditions were added voluntarily by the applicant and that a reconsideration would be a hardship on the people in the Newlight target neighborhood who would have to return to a council meeting to express their opposition. She said they "will

By Julia T. Wilson
Virginia Beach Office of Public Information.

The Virginia Beach Rotary Club has announced that this year's Outstanding City Employee is Ruby B. Christian, of the Printing and Distribution Division.

This award has been given annually since 1980 by the Rotary Club to honor employees who might not otherwise receive recognition. The award seeks to highlight employees who exemplify excellence both at work and in the community.

Nominations are sent in each year and a panel of non-Rotarians opens the sealed envelopes and begins the task of selecting the person most deserving of the award, which can be a difficult decision due to the high caliber of nominees. In past years, winners were Richard Branch of Parks and Recreation (1980), Billy Ballou of Circuit Court (1981), Diane Roache of Public Information (1982), Judith Wilder of Parks and Recreation (1983), and Jean Wallace of School Administration (1984).

Much Service

As an employee who began working for the city as a clerk typist 17 years ago, Christian, has since risen to be a key member of the management team in her division. She has also served a nine-year stint on the Personnel Board, as the representative for all city employees. Christian is also a person described as exceptional, a real go-getter with a can-do attitude, an example for others, and a trusted friend.

Christian began working for the city in 1969 as one of the two-member Print Shop staff. Her boss was Harry Smithson, who now serves as administrator of the division, and she says they used to dream about the changes in store.

Now the shop has increased more than five-fold, and it serves the needs of over 35 city agencies and offices daily.

"It's like a dream come true for us," says Christian. "There's a lot of personal feeling involved

1986-87 city budget contains no real estate tax increase

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The $423,142,404 1986-87 Operating Budget proposed by City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck contains no real estate tax rate increase for the fifth consecutive year. The increase over the budget proposed last year, 9.87 percent, is the smallest increase in nine years. The increase over the current year's budget as adjusted is only 7.96 percent.

Citizens will have an opportunity to comment on the budget at a public hearing at the Pavilion at 7 p.m. April 29. Another public hearing will be held prior to the first reading of the budget appropriation ordinance at 2 p.m. on May 12. The second reading is scheduled for May 15. In the meantime, Council will have budget workshops on April 17 and April 22 from 4 to 7 p.m. and a budget reconciliation workshop following the Pavilion public hearing on May 8 from 4 to 7 p.m.

The budget also includes full-funding of the School Board budget at $178,671,982.

Balances the budget through current revenues rather than using part of the general fund balance.

Provides for a total of $6,516,361 in pay-as-you-go capital improvement projects.

Includes 126 new city positions and 298 new school positions.

The city's capital improvement program is reflected in the operating budget in connection with costs associated with operation and maintenance of a number of new facilities. These include Birdneck and Rosemont Forest Elementary Schools, the Central Library, Woodstock Park and several small parks, the Virginia Marine Science Museum, Seatack Recreation Center expanded Animal Control Building, Kempsville Greens Golf Course and several major roads.

In his budget message, Muehlenbeck points out that as the city's fixed assets grow, further demands will be made on maintenance and operating dollars.

The budget is also influenced by liability insurance costs and the lessening contribution of federal dollars.

The $3,027,930 budgeted for liability insurance represents an increase of $1,365,930 over the previous year.

Muehlenbeck expects population growth to slow to more historic levels beginning this year. However, the costs associated with growth and which tend to lag behind growth will continue.

The budget includes a four percent across-the-board salary increase for all city employees. They are also eligible for merit increases. The budget also provides for a 10 percent salary increase for teachers (7 1/2 percent plus one step).

Of the 298 new positions in the schools, 151 are teaching positions needed to meet the Standards and Quality requirements and an expected enrollment increase of three percent.

Also, 32 new positions are recommended in the Police and Fire Departments.

Education takes the biggest part of the budget, $178,671,982 or 42.22 percent of the total.

Mayor Heischob to wait tables for leukemia benefit

Mayor Harold Heischob will be honorary matre d' for the first annual Virginia Beach celebrity waiters luncheon at the Greenwich Road Holiday Inn on April 11th from 12:00 noon until 1:30 p.m. to benefit the Leukemia Society of America, Virginia Chapter.

A variety of Virginia Beach's leading business executives and city officials such as James R. Dobbins, Edwin C. Kellam, Jr. with George H. Wale Company, Irvin Hill with Cox Cable Tidewater, will be waiting on their friends and colleagues in costumes ranging from gorilla to cowboy outfits. Pie throws, a belly dancer and an auction of items donated by local merchants will be other added attractions.

Flower Mart slated for the dome

The Junior Virginia Beach Garden Club will sponsor a Flower Mart in the Virginia Beach Dome on April 16, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., to benefit the Virginia Museum of Marine Sciences.

State NOW conference scheduled

The Virginia National Organization of Women will hold its annual State Conference April 4 through 6 at the Virginia Beach Howard Johnson Motor Lodge.

Speakers will include Sonia Johnson, Mary L. Redd, Lynn Hatch Schaffran, and Kathy Webb. Registration is open to non-members and members of NOW.

May 26 Council meeting rescheduled

The regularly scheduled Council meeting on May 26 has been cancelled because it falls on Memorial Day, a city holiday.

Pre-natal education

Is it so unusual for a fetus to learn behavioral responses while still in the womb? Questions concerning this type of fetal education have in recent years received considerable attention. Answers however, have not been realized on a national basis until now.

The National Association for Education has, in the past six years, put considerable time and money into testing various theories of pre-natal education. Such tests included sonic response, developments of taste preference, and kinesthetics.

One method of testing sonic responses was by assigning a set number of women (A) to repeatedly play, hum, or sing a designated lullaby. Another set of second trimester women were used as a standard, for comparison. These women did not play lullabies to the fetus. The lullabies were discontinued upon the end of the eighth month of pregnancy.

As in all the tests, the infants' heart rate, brain activity, and irritability were carefully monitored when the lullaby was played, as well as when not. The lullaby had a soothing effect on the (A) babies.

On the same basis, children given bottles while hearing the familiar sound of their mother's voice were easily calmed, while children given bottles and hearing an unfamiliar voice or lullaby ate sporadically.

The test for taste preferences determined the influence of the mother's enzymes upon the fetus as early as eight weeks. The first of the five senses to develop, taste, was determined by the responses of infants when given various liquids. Kinesthetic testing was through a health specialist assigning a chosen exercise at designated times. The best example of the results is, an equestrian was assigned to ride in the morning hours. She continued to ride until the child's eighth month. When the child was born, irritability could be soothed by a consistent rocking motion simulating the movements of a horse. This was particularly effective in the morning hours.

With such obvious results of the infant's pre-conditioned patterns of behavior, it appears pre-natal education may be very worthwhile. The final conclusion of the tests was still indefinite, but the doctors advise, "Sing to your unborn child, talk to it, familiarize it with sounds, tastes, movements, and you." —J.A.L.

Mental Eavesdropping

Truly, the only area yet unviolated by man is the inner self, the human mind. What would happen should our technology advanced to the point of enabling us to expose the individual thoughts and feelings of others?

The common response to this type of "mental eavesdropping" is that it is a form of trespassing on individual rights. George Orwell's book 1984 stressed the fact that we are the center of our own being, the comparison by which we are able to analyze and understand. If our self-analysis were to undergo the constant evaluation of other people and be repeatedly influenced by such thoughts, it is easy to see how detrimental this would be to attaining the sense of identity usually achieved in adolescence, and necessary to the establishment of a true self-consciousness.

If such thought processes were monitored, a type of censorship would be needed. Who is qualified to censor another's thoughts and feelings? Should anyone have that authority? On what basis would he or she justify their findings? The norm is not acceptable in the realm of the mind where the creative self is a deviant of the norm, and where individuality is the essence of the self.

It is good to realize that in cases of mental illness, a greater understanding can be achieved, therefore making this form of mental x-ray a plus for medical science. It is foolish, however, to assert that such a fantastic device would be used solely for medical science. The desire to know and feel another's thoughts and experiences was measured somewhat in the success of the motion picture movie "Brainstorm" which made use of such a device. We are our own worst enemy, surely our thoughts are better left in the cocoon of their own making.

After all this, would it surprise you to know that the U.S. funded various exploratory programs to develop this potentially powerful "weapon." Their reasoning is...if the enemy's thoughts could be interpreted, so could his actions be. For several decades various types of equipment have been used to scan, mimic, and understand brain wave patterns. The remaining piece to this intricate puzzle is interpretation. If such thought interpretation could be qualified, who has the right to delve into the only truly personal aspect of life left, the human mind? —J.A.L.

AIDS: The fears--the facts

By Beatrice Kitchen

A single word was responsible for uprooting the emotional security of an entire nation five years ago. In 1981, when this disease was first pinpointed, this most vile of four letter words wasn't even, in fact, a real word—but rather an abbreviation.

Spelled out in full, it stood for acquired immunodeficiency syndrome. Our label happy culture called it AIDS.

Initially, we were told that AIDS was confined to the homosexual population. Some who heard that smiled smugly and pointed a finger. The rest of the nation breathed a sigh of relief. Soon thereafter, another culture was targeted. Drug abusers, more specifically those who used shared hypodermic needles to self-administer drugs, were succumbing to the illness. There was no cure in sight. A few less people felt safe and secure.

Still later, and for reasons yet to be proved, natives of Haiti were added to the poster of victims. Horrified, America suddenly spotted pointing the finger and began to wonder—who's next?

Why certain groups of people? Why those with an atypical sexual preference? Why people from a certain geographic area? Why in Zaire, for instance, were almost all cases being heterosexually transmitted?

People clustered into small, intimate groups at cocktail parties, muttering things like "germ warfare...." Preachers were beginning to theorize from the pulpit with regard to the possibility of the "last days" and

"God sending plagues upon the earth."

Research scientists, meanwhile, were requesting grants as fast as they could lick the postage stamps. They had to find out what caused it before they could cure it. Where was it focused, why had certain social groups become ill? Why, certain cultures? What made it contagious? And perhaps the most frightening question of all—was it preventable?

To be living amidst the medical technology of the '80's and to hear of a disease so blatantly defying all known treatment threw the scientific world into a near panic. Our healthy, fitness-oriented, safe and secure middle America no longer existed as such. We had been threatened and were under a full scale attack. Only this was a terrorist of a different sort. An internal, mysterious, unidentified terrorist who was bringing all our cultures together by striking at the very core of our national ideal, our very world. It was in fact an act of war and America rallied around her scientific community.

Research laboratories sprang to life, some temporarily laying aside decade long research projects to free themselves for intense concentration against the enemy. Goal no. 1 was to find the cure.

It took millions of dollars and millions more of man-hours, but in 1984, three years after the malady was first identified, its cause was discovered. This was indeed step one on the path toward the ultimate cure.

The cause of AIDS is a virus known as HTLV-III. The breakdown of letters translates into a string of words—Human T-lymphotropic Virus, Type III. In people with normal blood cells, when a virus attacks the body, an army rises up in defense against the invasion. The army is made up of antibodies.

It would follow, then, that the goal, after defining the virus, would be to develop a test that would accurately determine the presence of antibodies specifically "armed" to fight the HTLV-III virus.

In early summer of 1985, the Food and Drug Administration licensed two laboratories to provide a test to identify those antibodies.

This test has a 93% accuracy. Though this represents a monumentally credible start toward the prevention of the transmission of the disease, it is not in and of itself a test to diagnose AIDS. This test is performed to detect and eliminate blood donated by those who have antibodies specific to the HTLV-III virus. Use of this test is based on the assumption that presence of the antibodies may indicate the presence of the AIDS virus and therefore, promote the risk of transmitting AIDS to the recipient of that donated unit of blood.

There will be some who show a false positive result. In other words, the donor may not have, or have ever had AIDS, but will somehow have acquired the antibodies to fight the virus that causes AIDS.

Tornadoes: they strike anywhere

Each year tornadoes injure and kill hundreds of people and cause millions of dollars in damage. Although the continental plains and Gulf Coast are the most favorable areas for tornado formation, these violent storms can occur in Virginia Beach at any time. In the past 25 years, Virginia has been struck by 207 tornadoes, causing 53 deaths.

Tornadoes occur more frequently where the warm, moist air from the Gulf Coast meets the cool, dry air of the north and northwest. The tornado season can begin as early as February when this center lies over the Central Gulf states. Through March, the center moves to the southeast Atlantic Coast states where, in April, tornado frequency reaches its peak. During May the center of maximum frequency moves to the southern plains states and then northward to the northern plains and Great Lakes area.

A tornado usually develops from a severe thunderstorm. Tornado winds turn counterclockwise at speeds that vary from under 100 miles per hour to nearly 300 miles per hour and move forward at an average speed of 35 miles per hour. A tornado's destructive force works through the combined action of strong rotary winds, causing a vacuum, and flying debris.

The distinctive, funnel-shaped cloud is easy to recognize. As it touches the earth, it whistles and twists, throwing debris in all directions. It is usually accompanied by hail, violent thunderstorms, and strong winds.

The width of a tornado cloud can vary from a few feet to over a mile, but the average width is one quarter of a mile. Tornadoes have stayed on the ground from a few seconds to nearly three hours, covering distances of a few yards to more than 200 miles.

Tornadoes are classified as weak, strong, or violent. Weak tornadoes comprise 62 percent of all tornadoes but cause only two percent of the fatalities. Strong tornadoes comprise 36 percent and cause 30 percent of the deaths. Only two percent of all tornadoes are classified as violent, yet they cause 68 percent of the deaths reported from these storms.

Writer's Block

Avoiding vacation stress

By Julie Luke

Summer is approaching and so are family vacations. This year thousands of people will vacation in Virginia Beach. With the intention of relaxing, these vacationers will experience more stress than the break merits.

Psychologists acknowledge the need for people to take a "time out" in life. Too often these much needed breaks are put off until the crisis is resolved and the stressful situation is over. This leaves residual tension which fatigues the mind.

The ideal break, according to Wainscott Junior College professor of Psychology G. E. Brewin, is planned isolation. It is essential to the enjoyment of the trip to plan ahead, but spending time with yourself is the key to coping with stress.

The urge should not be so much to go somewhere with someone but to go somewhere with yourself.

The urge should not be so much to go somewhere with someone but to go somewhere with yourself. Take time to take stock of the events shaping your life, understand why they occur, and their ultimate resolution.

Dr. Brewin, former resident of Virginia Beach, believes strongly in the concept of self-analysis as the key to dissipating stress. Though the idea of being alone in an ordinary place may not fit your idea of a vacation, it may be far more beneficial than the most exciting cruise. The importance of a bland environment is the absence of distractions, therefore promoting introspective thought.

Another plus is, there is no need to travel for this break. In fact, a great deal of stress can be alleviated by avoiding traffic tension. "Behind the wheel" tension is fatiguing during the most calm season, but the onslaught of fellow travelers can be maddening. Just as you would plan for the road trip, choose a time, place, and means of obtaining that "out of the way" island, your bed, or that shadowy tropical oasis—your bathroom. You may not achieve that healthy looking tan, but your mental health will greatly improve.

Mother Goose revisited

If you are like me, there is still a small child lurking within you, waiting to pop out and express itself. For me, it happens when I see a magical play or when I watch a simple puppet show. Just being around small children brings out the child in me; it follows, of course, that I don't mind singing a round of "Eensy Weensy Spider" or playing the game "Duck Duck Goose." I would guess, though, that the one thing above all else that brings out the wee one in me is a book. I love books and I always have. I was the one who had to have my picture books on my bed at night, piled all around, before I could go to sleep; forget the stuffed animals, but give me my books!

childlike, with each item carefully outlined in black ink, and larger than life. Perhaps that is why his stories are lively and happy and matter-of-fact. Like children, de Paola's characters are resilient, accepting the problems of life without melodrama:

He loves me,
He don't,
He'll have me,

He won't,
He would
If he could,
But he can't
So he don't.

Tomie de Paola's Mother Goose is a book for children who enjoy being read to and for adults who want to enjoy childhood again through the eyes of the wee ones.

Anthony's stories

One reason I keep contributing to this column is that when I get excited about something I'm reading, I want to share it. Every so often, however, I haven't read anything that moved me particularly—and the deadline is coming up before I can get to another book. This is one of those times. I'd like to use it to introduce you to a most unusual author.

Carolyn Caywood

His name is Piers Anthony Dillingham Jacob. That being a bit much, he just uses Piers Anthony when he publishes. I've never met this author but the personal notes he adds to his books are far more revealing than the talk show and tour appearances of other authors. They're also an inspiration for anyone who hopes to become an author.

Anthony is a versatile author, writing both fantasy and science fiction, sometimes in the same novel. His trilogy Blue Adept, Split Infinity, and Juxtaposition involved two worlds: Proton, a high tech but decadent society in our universe; and Phaze where magical adepts rule demesnes and ride unicorns. In alternating chapters, the plot in each world begins to merge with the other.

If you like pure, you'll find Anthony's Xanth stories are overgrown with them. Xanth is a magic land (shaped suspiciously like Florida, where Piers Anthony lives) in our otherwise mundane world.

There are now 12 Xanth novels following three generations of the royal family and assorted other characters from a dragon named Stanley Steamer to Murphy, the Magician who makes things go wrong. For a light hearted romp with centaurs, ogres, night mares and the English language, Xanth can't be beat. By the way, in those author notes Anthony actually gives his readers credit when he uses a pun one of them contributed. No wonder he has millions of loyal fans.

The series Anthony is working on now involves personified attributes of physics and mythology. On a Pale Horse is the story of Death, Bearing an Hourglass of Time. Death, Time, Nature, and others are trying to preserve the world from the Byzantine plotting of Satan. So far, this series is entertaining, but more serious than Xanth. It will be fascinating to see how Anthony pulls all the plot threads together.

Anthony is a prolific author who claims to have the cure for writer's block. He has written many individual novels as well as the series I've mentioned. His short stories have just been collected in Anthology. Any reader who enjoys science fiction, fantasy or good humor and fun with language should appreciate his books.

Turn your back yard into wildlife habitat

If you live in one of the more developed areas of Virginia Beach, you probably never considered yourself a wildlife manager.

You can, however, turn your yard into a prime wildlife habitat for birds by selective planting of trees in your yard. Even small yards can be made attractive to birds by the right choice of trees and shrubs.

Habitat

This area is used by a large and varied population of birds throughout the year. A variety of trees and shrubs can assure that your yard has the habitat needed for all seasons—places for birds to feed, sing, court, nest, rest or hide. Birds like variety both in sizes and kinds of plantings. Many common shade trees and landscape shrubs offer nesting or hiding places; but, unfortunately, they are of little food value for birds. Landscape plants that do offer fruits attractive to birds include dogwood, crabapples, hollies, cherries, and Eastern red cedar. For small yards especially, dogwood is a beautiful landscape tree which is attractive to 45 species. Cardinals, robins, woodpeckers, brown thrashers, grosbeaks, and mockingbirds are just some of the species that favor the dogwoods.

A variety of hollies are landscape favorites in our area. They also have a persistent berry-like fruit which attracts 28 species of birds. Robins, brown thrashers, cedar waxwings and mockingbirds frequent holly trees.

Several species of oak provide food and habitat for woodpeckers, blue jays, chickadees, titmice, and nuthatches as well as some 30 other species of birds. These oaks include willow, pin, red, and live oak. The live oak is virtually an evergreen holding its leaves until late winter, this gives birds winter shelter as well as food. Live oak is a southern landscape favorite which does well in our area.

Fruit trees

There are several varieties of cherry available for both landscape use and fruit production. These trees have beautiful springtime blossoms and the fruit attracts 47 species of birds, notably purple finches, robins, and evening grosbeaks. Pecan, plum and fig trees are also effective in attracting a variety of birds.

Don't limit your plantings only to deciduous trees. Evergreens are attractive to birds for the winter shelter and protection from predators they provide. Eastern red cedar, one common local evergreen attracts 22 species of birds. This tree is effective in landscape use as a screening plant.

If you are fortunate enough to own a large homestead or own several acres of woodland in the city, you can really get involved with birds. Large lots mean that you can plant more species in your yard. If you own some woodland, you can favor the species such as red oak, red cedar, wild cherry, and holly that attract birds. Try creating some openings in your woods. This "biological edge" will attract a variety of birds and other wildlife.

Landscape so that you can see the birds-attracting features of your trees from a convenient window, patio or terrace. Supplement your tree plantings with feeders and bird-attracting flowers, and you can enjoy a lot of wildlife right here in the city. With proper tree selection, you can have a succession of flowers, fruits and birds throughout the year.

By actually going into the neighboring community, Rawles was able to obtain the names of 23 others, with burial dates, that were buried within the acreage.

A 1983 grave marked by two cinderblocks was never granted a permit by the city for burial. Two graves were found 65 feet from the city's recorded cemetery's border.

The cemetery was a designated burial site for a neighboring black community that could not afford to bury their dead elsewhere. The same families have been living in that area for over 200 years. The oldest graves are marked by pieces of tin, cinderblock, and stone covered in ivy.

Rawles took city council members Meyers Oberndorf and Louis Jones to see the property.

The original plans allowed for the recorded grave site to remain by laying a paved parking lot directly over the unmarked graves, and leaving the marked graves untouched.

Finally Rawles took Joe Boyd of Boyd Construction Company to the site of the graves. Boyd stressed to Rawls and the civic league that he had been unaware of the extent of the cemetery.

Rawls referred to the movie "Poltergeist," as a parallel and said the entire area, including exposed graves have been turned over to the city's Department of Health.

The zoning issue is yet to be voted upon by the City Council, but the residents of Woodhurst have already cast their votes in the form of petitions. Further investigations will follow, and residents are asked to come forth with any information concerning marked or unmarked grave sites in Great Neck.

have to come back and lose wages."

The condition which CBN wanted dropped was the retention of a 150-foot buffer along the eastern property line which would remain R-8 Residential District and a 150-foot buffer along the southern property line which would remain R-5 Residential District.

The rezoning was for R-8 Residential District to B-2 Community Business District on 28 acres on the south side of Indian River Road east of Centerville Turnpike.

CBN claimed that the initial frontage along Indian River Road is most logically suited for continuity of B-2 community business District land use.

CBN wants to place a restaurant on the property. The Rev. R. B. Lewis, of the Newlight community, said that the restaurant would be next to his church.

The Rev. Thomas Jennings said he was opposed to any change in the agreement. He also said that the representatives of CBN were inconsiderate in that they requested a closed meeting to discuss the issue.

The vote against rezoning was 7-2 with Councilmen H. Jack Jennings Jr. and Robert Fentress dissenting.

A family affair

Quality leads to success

White's, 2nd largest, expands with times

When asked what is his motto was, or, indeed, if he had one, Norman T. White, 52 year-old founder of the second largest nursery and greenhouse firm in Virginia, answered unhesitatingly, "Quality!"

A tour of White's Nursery and Greenhouses, Inc., gives new definition to the word. Quality abounds.

Nothing appears out of the place. Green-shirted employees move among the myriad rows of symmetrically arranged greenhouses on quiet electric cars. Inside the six odd acres of nurseries and greenhouses, horticulturists and their assistants can be seen bending over an occasional plant, reporting their findings to the main office by UHF walkie-talkie radio.

White, a former naval architect who worked on the Polaris and Poseidon missile program, began his modest empire by building one small greenhouse behind the family home in 1956. After the surface tests of the submarine missiles were completed, White quit to become a full-time 18-hour-a-day nurseryman.

If White's motto is Quality, in all of its attendant, forms—and then some—an observer might add the word, Risk. Inside White's paneled offices, set a distance below a large mounted Arctic Char caught in the Northwest Territory, a new-looking, very hi-tech-looking computer tallies daily inventories, costs, deliveries, and an easy score of arcane horticultural matters. A printout at any given hour can be shocking.

White's operation requires the care and continual nurturing of over 500,000 plants. Bedding plants, potted flowers, ferns, and sundry hanging plants, all neatly arranged, categorized, labeled, are moistened, humidified, fertilized and, yes, (Continued on the following page)

Farmers hit by corn, grain price drop

The margin between profit and loss is painfully narrow for Virginia's small grains producers. "Farmers can't afford to have weather problems for the 1986 crop," said Daniel E. Brann, Virginia Tech Extension agronomist.

While Virginia can produce excellent small grains, farmers need to get $2.50 a bushel to realize a profit. The contract price in January was between $2.40 and $2.50, down from the $4.20 price of about four years ago.

Virginia's small grains crops suffered from both a freeze and drought at critical times in 1985 that resulted in reduced yields.

The price farmers receive in the future will be affected by the new farm bill provisions which are expected to clear the reserves of small grains and reduce storage costs, said Brann. In March farmers will assess and decide if it is wise to take land out of production under the conservation reserve program.

The economic outlook for the state's corn producers is equally dismal, Brann said. With corn expected to be sold at about $2 a bushel, the producers cannot expect to make a profit.

"Farmers who do not own their own land—who are paying rent—will be particularly hard hit," he said. "Even if they are excellent managers, there is not enough potential profit in corn production for land rent payments."

Brann added that this might be a point of adjustment in the future. If there can be an adjustment in land cost, corn producers may be able to make a living.

"Looking on the positive side, costs of some of the inputs such as seeds, fertilizer and pesticides have not increased," said Brann.

Virginia's corn producers have been keeping up with new technology, adopting new practices that give them an economic advantage.

Corn for grain brought a total of $61 million to the state's producers in 1984, the last year for which final statistics are available. Virginia ranks 21 among 41 states producing corn for grain, growing less than one percent of the nation's total.

What to do until the doctor comes

I've thought nupteen million Azaleas since moving here from California. Nothing grows for me! Last year I actually bought them while in bloom, and after the summer they were shriveled, with dinky leaves. I always look for sales at K-Mart, Farm Fresh, and other places like that, but now I'm wondering. Is there really, really a difference between the big department store plants, and those sold by a nursery? Please be honest, and tell me what the advantages are of shopping at a garden center or nursery, compared to the discount stores?

One of the biggest advantages of purchasing shrubs and trees from a reputable garden center is the knowledge from employees who can give you the necessary instructions on how to plant successfully. Something to keep in one trained horticulturalist or certified nurseryman who can help you plant successfully. Many times in a "discount store," the person who is working in the "garden shop" has been pulled from another department, has little knowledge of what the shrubs are, and probably no knowledge on how to plant and care for them.

Which is the best mulch for ornamentals and shrubs? We use pine needles from our own yard, and are forever plagued by slugs. Would wood chips help alleviate this problem, or would the chips merely attract another pest—the termites?—I'm also concerned about the overall attractiveness of "oil" mulch. Thank you for being there.

Pine straw, hardwood, cedar, pine mulch, nuggets—what you use a lot of times depends on mere preference. Hardwood and cedar are probably the most effective against washing; pine straw the least expensive but quickest to decompose and consequently to replenish; nuggets are best as a top dressing and pine mulch the most readily available.

As for attracting slugs, any mulch will do that, because slugs are attracted to wet dark areas, such as flower beds. As far as termites, pine based mulches contain natural turpentine to act as a repellent to termites. But certainly you should be aware of the potential problem and treat your soil with recommended insecticides.

I want a tree (potted) for our living room. What type would best survive. There's ample, indirect light. I want it to be hardy, long-living, with a maximum height not to exceed seven feet. Also, how much care would this require?

I don't know of any "tree" that will stop growing at 7 feet. But certainly many can be kept pruned at 7 feet. Any of your ficus family, i.e. weeping fig, rubber trees, fiddle fig, will do nicely. There are many palms, philodendrons, especially split-leaf, emerald and princess grown on poles, as well as schiffers, aralia and aralia that can be maintained easily.

I've read so much about the dangers of chemicals being applied to your lawn, that I'm thinking of "going natural." That is, not spraying, but instead attempting to attract the right balance of insects while adding good, wholesome materials and hoping to maintain a healthy yard. Am I crazy? Are the lawn chemicals really that dangerous? My husband asks too.

Consumer packaged chemicals for insects, diseases and weeds are safe to use if directions and precautions are followed air conditioned, from infancy to adolescent strength.

If they meet the requirements of White's one-word motto, if they possess quality, the strong adolescents will be shipped throughout the region—and as far away as Boston and Chicago.

What had once taken most of White's spare time as an energetic architect with a growing—and enthusiastically understanding—family, now requires the full-time employment of 62 men and women on a 15 acre facility. And the single, home-built greenhouse, long removed, has expanded to a modern fortress of super plants living in 24 hi-tech greenhouses, computer-controlled, and one of them covering three acres.

Says Tal White, 23 year-old son of the elder White, and an Ohio State University graduate with a degree in horticulture: "We wanted the computer because of the absolute necessity for proper temperature control. If 68 degrees is required for the night, that's what we give our plants...not 67 or 69 degrees. But 68 degrees, exactly!"

It has been this dogged adherence to quality that's made White's Chrysanthemums famous. He describes this ornamental not without a strong sense of propriety, as if the name itself belongs in part to him. "It's our pot plant, a beautiful flower of many different colors. A very unique flower that has good holding quality...up to three weeks...and it can be raised year-around."

Does White himself possess a secret for such quality Chrysanthemums, as a French chef might possess a coveted recipe? His untanned face breaks into an easy smile. "I've just learned little techniques along the way," he explains. "You might say I've sort of refined the book on Chrysanthemums."

Indeed, White appears to have refined many books on many subjects. His daughter, 26 year-old Dana Byers, comments: "We were raised to accept hard work as one of the requirements for quality. That's our name that goes on each plant." Dana, an O.D.U. marketing graduate, was recently named manager of White's new 5000 square-foot garden center, which adjoins a 16,000 square-foot greenhouse.

Tips On Wood Ashes
Ashes from the wood burning stove can be a source of potash for the home garden. Wood ashes contain about 5.5 percent potash and 1.8 percent phosphoric acid, but no nitrogen. Nitrogen is the most important fertilizer material required by most plants, so wood ashes are an incomplete fertilizer. They still can be useful.

David Stevenson at work

Teaches 4-H courses

Agribusinessman puts his opinions to work in Chesapeake and Beach

David Stevenson, 25 year-old marketing manager of Stevenson Ford Tractor in Chesapeake, father of three, farmer, and civic fireball, has an opinion that should warm the hearts of parents everywhere. He believes children should be given more responsibility as a means of learning confidence and discipline.

Stevenson speaks with some authority on the subject. As a 15 year-old Kempsville High School student, he began work at Stevenson Ford Tractor (owned by his father, William David Stevenson) as a floor-sweeper and general flunkie. When he graduated in 1978 he was an officer of DECA (Distributive Education Council of America) and listed in the prestigious Who's Who in American High Schools.

And today Stevenson has taken his experiences — and opinions — to the Virginia Beach and Chesapeake 4-H clubs. For the past two years he has taught courses on tractor and machinery safety. His students, from 14 to 17 years old, are not only taught the inherent dangers of tractors and equipment, but they learn how to disassemble engines and reassemble them.

"The 4-H clubs, and all the instruction offered, teaches youngsters basic responsibilities. They learn to care about things, and, as their confidence grows, to care about themselves. They learn that to get such things as medicine and food, a fair amount of responsibility is involved."

Stevenson cites the suburban crawl into the heretofore rural areas of Chesapeake and Virginia Beach as prime reason for parents to steer their children towards 4-H activity.

"All you need is a pile of dirt, a pet dog, cat, bird, or simply an interest in mechanics, to become a 4-H'er," says Stevenson. "As Virginia Beach and Chesapeake continues to grow, we tend to see more and more disaffected youth. The 4-H gives youngsters not only an identity, but builds a solid foundation of knowledge and confidence ... basics they can carry into adult life."

Speaking of the courses he has taught for the last two years, Stevenson recalls the two tractor accidents he had witnessed during his farm career, and the appalling statistics.

"Last year there were over 50,000 farm accidents, with roughly three percent of that number resulting in a loss of limbs. Nationwide, there are 500-800 farm fatalities every year, and that's too much. We can't afford to lose these good people."

Stevenson and his wife, Brenda (formerly Faircloth), and their three children, raise Belled Galway cows and grain on their 50 acre Deep Creek Farm, Galway Acres. His children, two girls and a boy, with ages ranging from seven to two years, will grow up on the farm, if he has his way, says Stevenson.

"They're going to learn about the land ... and responsibility."

that time.

"Before farmers go into vegetable production they have to consider the limiting factors—early frosts, variety selections, specialized equipment."

"Though farmers might be able to grow potatoes in Virginia, the market demands require specialized equipment for harvesting, grading, washing and packing directly for the consumer," said Bell. "Without that equipment, Virginia farmers would not be in a position to compete."

enthusiastic in order for it to succeed.

"It is a process of learning how to look for the alternatives and analyze the information and resources, that must be part of any planning for the future," said Bell, who is a member of the faculty of Tech's college of Agriculture and Life Sciences.

With funds from the Agricultural Marketing Service, Virginia Tech Extension set about learning the needs of vegetable cooperatives. Particular needs identified, included help in handling large amounts of data involved in keeping track of each member's share of the produce and sales.

"With these specific challenges, Extension was able to look for specific solutions," Bell said. With help from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the Southern vegetable cooperatives were able to acquire microcomputers and Virginia Tech's agricultural economists wrote computer programs to handle their specific needs.

"We are able to see the next challenges to help these cooperatives," he added. "They need information on how other production and distribution operations work. In February, 11 Virginia cooperative managers, directors and Extension workers toured South Florida vegetable operations. Florida, where a large percentage of the nation's vegetables are grown, was at its peak season at

Time to dig, transplant, fertilize

By the time you are reading this spring will be upon us.

The digging and transplanting of azaleas can be done while they are in bloom; it will help you to arrange the colors where you want them. Make sure to prune early flowering shrubs and trees as soon after flowering as possible, and a handful of fertilizer around each plant will help it get off to a good start.

If you have not dug and separated perennials by now, last chance!

Roses purchased "bare root" should be planted by the end of the month so that they have time to put out new roots before growth starts.

As camellias finish blooming clean up old blooms and destroy them to help keep down bloom blight.

Non-blooming evergreens such as boxwood and privet should be pruned as new growth is about to start. An early feeding of a good complete fertilizer and mulch will be beneficial.

Now is the last chance for cool weather vegetable crops as the heat of summer will be on us before they have time to mature. However, there is still time for succession planting of quick crops such as radishes, leaf lettuce, turnips, and beets.

Seed of warm weather vegetables and ornamentals can be sown indoors now in a sunny window. This is an inexpensive way to get varieties not available at local nurseries.

If you have cold frames be sure to keep a watch on the temperature as the sun gets higher—ventilate freely.

Last, but not least, faded flowers and flower stems should be removed from spring flowering bulbs and the foliage should be left on as long as possible to build up strength for next spring.

Topped trees not always a good idea

"Is it time to top my trees?"

The answer to this question is that it is never a good time to take a majestic 100 to 200-year-old oak tree and reduce it to a 20-foot eyesore.

This is the time of the year that many tree-topping services advertise and calls come into county Extension agents.

There are several reasons given for this practice of grinding our trees into oversized hat racks. None of which is valid.

One reason is the fear that a falling limb will damage the house. There are several options for homeowners with this fear.

They can replace the tree with a more suitable, smaller tree, lighten the load of the larger limb by removing some branches or use bracing and cabling techniques to provide supplemental support.

Topping does not increase total shade, a common misconception that also leads to tree-topping. New growth behind cuts is very dense and weak. It reduces air flow, making an ideal breeding-ground for insects and diseases. It also causes increased limb breakage in stormy weather.

Saving large limbs off a tree leaves large, open wounds. These wounds rarely heal properly. They always cause moderate to serious injury, drastically reducing the life of the tree.

Tree paints may sooth the conscience of the homeowner, but do nothing to protect the tree.

Farmers have various options

The uncertain economic situation for producers of many of the traditional agriculture commodities is prompting farmers to look for new markets and new products as a means of running a profitable operation.

"For different farmers there are different solutions," said James B. Bell, Virginia Tech Extension agricultural economist. Bell has seen a tremendous increase in the interest in vegetables as an alternative crop for farmers in Virginia, since Southside tobacco growers formed an ambitious vegetable cooperative three years ago.

For some farmers, growing vegetables is a viable option, and forming local cooperatives to handle the packing, shipping and marketing is a way for smaller farmers to compete successfully, said Bell. He noted, however, that a survey shows that though there had been about 100 vegetable marketing cooperatives in the south 20 years ago, only about 30 were still in operation and of them only 10 are economically viable.

He warns farmers against rushing to embrace solutions that have appeared successful for other farmers.

"They need to know how to assess their own resources, the community resources, their interests and goals," he said. "Extension can assist in this process, but the farmers and the community must be involved and en-

Navy Lt. James Scully logs plant information while standing watch in engineering spaces.

Scully, son of Beach residents

Smooth sailing for Navy lieutenant

By Robert J. Warner
Special to The Virginia Beach Sun

When the destroyer USS Lynde McCormick was commissioned in 1961, she was one of the first "tin cans" specifically built to fire guided missiles.

Recently the Lynde McCormick continues her vital mission alongside the Navy's newest multipurpose warships. Navyman like James Scully of Virginia Beach help keep the ship ready to fulfill her role in the U.S. Pacific Fleet.

Scully, a Navy lieutenant, is the ship's repair officer.

"My job is to coordinate shipboard repairs that are beyond ship's force capabilities. I complete the necessary administrative procedures to have the maintenance people at shore repair facilities come aboard and do the work," says Scully, 30, the son of Terence and Marcella Scully of Virginia Beach.

"There are instances when we need outside help to repair various parts of the ship," explains Scully. "When something major breaks down, the division contacts me and I get the entire process rolling. Our choices for repair work include shore-based SIMA's (Ship's Intermediate Maintenance Activities) and civilian contractors, as well as Navy tenders and repair ships."

Scully has been repair officer for four months.

"This is a lot different from being in charge of the deck department, which I was for about two years. As the first lieutenant, I was supervising 40 deck seamen. Now, I'm a division officer."

"Being the repair officer becomes very demanding when a piece of equipment breaks down just before we're scheduled to get under way," he adds. "When that happens, I've got to move fast to get the work done before we leave."

The 437-foot Lynde McCormick is designed with the versatility needed to engage sub-surface, surface and airborne threats. She operates with carrier battle groups and in support of amphibious forces, convoys and replenishment operations.

Equipped with a variety of weapons and sensors, her sonar, antisubmarine rockets and advanced torpedoes enable the guided missile destroyer to hunt down enemy submarines at extended ranges.

Armed with two 5-inch .54-caliber rapid-fire guns and a formidable mix of missiles, the ship has the ability to combat aircraft and surface vessels close-in or over the horizon.

At sea, the Lynde McCormick is home to a 350-man crew, who live and work aboard the 4,800-ton warship.

"It's hard to describe shipboard life," says Scully. "To really understand our work habits and responsibilities, you've got to be a part of it. The best training aid I know of is the ship itself. It's definitely not a simple job, but it is rewarding and it's never boring."

Scully originally enlisted in the Air Force in 1977.

"I went into the Air Force to work with electronics," he says. "I was working on the Titan II missile systems, which were outdated then and no longer exist. It was hard to get a good grasp on modern electronics."

Scully earned a bachelor's degree through a night study program at Wayland Baptist College, Plainview, Texas, and left the Air Force in 1981 to become a naval officer.

After graduating from officer's candidate school, Newport, R.I., Scully was commissioned an ensign and completed surface warfare officer training here. He reported aboard the Lynde McCormick in April 1983.

The Lynde McCormick and her crew visited liberty ports in the Philippines, Bahrain, Hong Kong, Singapore and Hawaii during a recent six-month deployment. It was Scully's second overseas cruise aboard the guided missile destroyer.

"I've liked the countries I've seen on deployments," he says. "Hong Kong and Singapore are outstanding. I wish I had had more time to spend in each place. The people are friendly and it's easy to get around and see the sights. Visiting an Oriental port was a unique experience for me."

As for his future, Scully will leave the Lynde McCormick this spring. Following four months of advanced damage control and firefighting training, he will become the damage control assistant aboard the guided missile cruiser Halsey.

"My main goal is to become qualified as an engineering officer of the watch. I've wanted to become an engineer since I joined the Navy," he says. "Being a repair officer has been a solid introduction. When I get aboard the Halsey, I'll be faced with engineering each day. I'll have to know everything about the propulsion and damage control aspects, and I'm looking forward to it."

when you see something start from the ground up."

Over the years, promotions had a way of seeking her out. She was promoted in 1982 to her current Printer III, position, where she supervises two employees and serves as third in the Print Shop chain of command.

She is responsible for the coordination and printing of many documents required by the city, including the Operating Budget, Capital Improvement Program materials, and the weekly City Council Agenda, to name a few. She also coordinates delivery of all copier supplies, paper, and printing to user departments, maintains records of copier supplies, and schedules reprographic printing production.

"She has twice received an outstanding merit rating and, considering the deadlines, user errors, and other pressure situations, her demand for a quality and timely end product never alters. Her excellent supervisory qualities are evident in the dedication and knowledge she has instilled in her subordinates," wrote Smithson in a letter of nomination. Other letters citing her for this award were submitted by two former city managers, a lawyer, city administrators, community leaders, corporate executives and co-workers.

She recently received a resolution from Mayor Harold Heischor for serving three terms as the City Council appointed employee representative on the Personnel Board, which hears employee grievances. She is also a charter member and former vice-president of the Virginia Beach Municipal Employees Federal Credit Union.

And as for her work-related duties don't keep her busy enough, Ruby also makes time for a variety of volunteer civic and church activities.

She's a charter member of the Southeastern Virginia Arts Association and is currently in her second year as chairman of the "Gospel Festival" sponsored by McDonald's Restaurants through SEVAA's "Afram Fest." She has been manager of the Oysterbush Stage for "Harborfest" for four years. She also sings, plays the piano and has directed several church choirs.

"Ms. Ruby B. Christian is one to count on to get things done. Although this may be a simple statement, it is extremely important to those who depend on volunteers to assist with complex and important projects," states one of her letters of nomination.

All in all, high praise for someone who describes herself as low-key.

"It's kind of funny that I won this award, because I am basically a low-key person," she says.

"I just try to do the best I can. The Rotary Club is a group of very nice people and I'm really grateful they felt I was worthy of this honor."

Winning Smile

A petite woman with curly dark hair and a winning smile, Ruby doesn't at first glance fit your mental image of a professional printer.

But when she starts talking about her work and the various projects she's handling, her eyes light up, she becomes animated, and you realize she's completely in her element.

"This is a way of life," she says. "With all the pressures and deadlines we face, you have to be comfortable with the work or you'd go crazy."

She credits the people she works with for keeping the job enjoyable.

"We have a lot of team spirit here, and that really makes a difference," she says. "All of us share in what has happened to me."

To unwind during her off hours, Ruby "hits the 88's," and is looking forward to buying a new piano of her own.

"If I can just play for 15 minutes in the morning, I'm set all day," she says. She and her daughter Paula, who is a Bayside High School senior, recently moved to Kempville.

Her work and life philosophy is summed up by a poster she has hung on one of her printing machines. "Hang in there," it reads, with a photo of a kitten clutching a tree limb for dear life.

She relates the words to a Bible verse she treasures, one that begins, "Be ye steadfast, unmovable..."

"Don't let the negative overpower you," she says. "If you love what you do, it's not like work at all."

According to an article excerpt from the New England Journal of Medicine, May 2, 1985, "Protection of our nation's blood and plasma supply from HTLV-III contamination has been one of the highest public health priorities related to the AIDS epidemic." This has always been a priority with the Red Cross.

With the FDA licensing, the American Red Cross leaped into action. Now they had the means to assure those receiving transfusions in the future, that they were safe from transmission of AIDS. There had been isolated cases of people who were not members of the high risk groups acquiring AIDS after a blood transfusion. The only means the Red Cross had of eliminating this internal disaster was to ask donors in the high risk groups (homosexuals, intravenous drug abusers, Haitians, and those who had had intimate contact with any of those groups) to disqualify themselves voluntarily from giving blood. In addition, a personal medical history helped to screen out potentially "hazardous" donors.

Within hours of the FDA's licensing the HTLV-III antibody test, Red Cross had signed a contract with the manufacturer for a year's supply of test kits. Two medical laboratories then proceeded to manufacture and distribute the kits throughout the 2300 blood banks and plasma centers in the United States as well as to other clinics and labs. Several other laboratories have applied to FDA for licensing to manufacture the test kits.

Again, the test is not meant to be a diagnostic tool for AIDS. It is designed to screen blood for the antibodies to the virus that causes AIDS.

(Those who are suspected of actually having AIDS are given a battery of tests and evaluated with regard to signs and symptoms.)

With the tremendous efforts being made by medical researchers, laboratories, and the Red Cross, the chances of acquiring AIDS through a blood transfusion are slim. Approximately 15 million people have undergone transfusions since 1980, and only 170 current AIDS cases have been related to blood transfusions. It is important to note that all of these cases occurred prior to the availability of the test kits.

Incubation time is known to take up to five years. This is the time between the actual exposure to the virus and the manifestation of the illness. Because of the possibility of a long incubation period, even with the testing capabilities, the situation may get worse before it gets better. However, to keep things in perspective, it is projected that from a total of four million blood donors, approximately 1500 will have a positive test, annually. This blood will not be used.

The average American must realize his chance of being infected with this disease is minute. Especially with the occasional "public hype," it is most important that we act responsibly in assessing any actual danger to ourselves and our families. In other words, there may be an occasional overzealous human rights advocate who, unfamiliar with the medical world, may tend to over stimulate the public consciousness with a resulting near panic. This situation can be avoided by consistent and careful reporting on the part of the medical community, and constant self-education on the part of the layman.

As it stands today, a little over five years since AIDS was first identified, with over 17,000 cases reported thus far, it still is basically a high risk group disease and the cases outside those groups are usually motivated by intimate access to a person or a person's blood from that high risk group.

AIDS is definitely a disease to be reckoned with, but it is also a situation that must be kept in a realistic perspective. Irresponsible communication can result in unnecessary panic as well as harm to those whose lives are psychologically affected by an unfounded panic.

Kitchen is a communications specialist for the City of Virginia Beach. This article was sponsored by the Office of Public Information of the City of Virginia Beach. The Medical Advisor for this article was Richard E. Easton, M.D., Director of Occupational Health for the employees of the city. Sjoland, Director of Department of Public Health.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of this suit is to have the Court decree that the remains buried in the Fannie Perkins Cemetery, located approximately 1,000 feet east of the intersection of Lynnhaven Parkway and Viking Drive in the City of Virginia Beach, which property is more particularly described in the Bill of Complaint on file in the office of the Clerk of this Court, be removed and interred in some more suitable repository by a reputable funeral director, in accordance with the strict status of his profession, and in a manner having due respect for the dead and the sensibilities of their living heirs and next of kin.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The Board of Zoning Appeals will conduct a Public Hearing on Wednesday, April 16, 1986, at 2:00 p.m. in the Council Chambers of the City Hall Building, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia. The staff briefing will be held at 1:30 p.m. in the City Council Meeting Room. The following applications will appear on the agenda.

REGULAR AGENDA:

Case 1. Alvin Ackiss requests a variance to allow parking of major recreational equipment in front of a building instead of behind the, nearest portion of a building adjacent to a public street on Lot 6 Block F, Section 25-B, Magic Hollow, 2932 Durbin Place, Lynnhaven Borough.

Case 2. George Ayers, Realty Consultants requests a variance of 25 feet to a 10 foot setback from the Virginia Beach - Norfolk Expressway (Rt. 44) instead of 35 feet as required on Lots 15 & 16, Laurel Park, 4666 South Boulevard, Kempsville Borough.

Case 3. Herald P. Pardue requests a variance of 7 feet to a "0" setback for a free-standing sign instead of a 7 foot setback as required on a Parcel, Lakeville Estates, 6200 - 6222, Pardue Court, Kempsville Borough.

Case 4. Scott A. Cust, Leaseor, requests a variance of 4 feet to an 8 foot fence instead of a 4 foot fence as allowed in a required setback from a street (both Virginia Beach Boulevard and Sedgfield Avenue) and to allow a wire woven fence along that portion of a parking area of one or more parking spaces adjacent to a street (Virginia Beach Boulevard and Sedgfield Avenue) and to waive the required 75% unobstructed light penetration of the fence where required on a Parcel, Boulevard Manor, 5369 Virginia Beach Boulevard, Kempsville Borough.

Case 5. Edna W. Carroll requests a variance of 44.57 feet of land to 55.43 acres of land instead of 100 acres of land as required for shelters for farm employees on a Parcel, Morse's Point, 345 Princess Anne Road, Pungo Borough.

Case 6. Mary Jo Perkins requests a variance of 8 feet to a 12 foot setback from Prescott Avenue instead of 20 feet setback (swimming pool) on Lot 49 Thalia Meadows, 111 Majestic Circle, Kempsville Borough.

Case 7. Mildred L. Steadham requests a variance of 5 feet to a 5 foot side (east side) and rear yard setback instead of 10 feet each as required (swimming pool) on Lot 137, Section 2, Homestead, 928 E. Goodview Drive, Kempsville Borough.

Case 8. Newtown Associates requests a variance of 8 parking spaces to 496 parking spaces instead of 504 parking spaces as required (restaurant, 6,217 square feet of floor area = 83 parking spaces; office space, 3,723 square feet of floor area = 9 parking spaces; retail space, 24,100 square feet of floor area = 412 parking spaces) on a Parcel, Newlight, 544 Newtown Road, Bayside Borough.

Case 9. Western Auto requests a variance of 150 square feet of sign area to 274 square feet of sign area instead of 124 square feet of sign area as allowed on Lots 5, 6, 7, 8 & 9, and Part of Lots 22, 23, 24, 25, & 26, Euclid Place, 4830 Virginia Beach Boulevard, Bayside Borough.

Case 10. George M. Lineberry requests a variance of 10 parking spaces to 53 parking spaces instead of 63 parking spaces as required (restaurant, 1800 square feet of floor area = 24 parking spaces; indoor recreational facility, 3900 square feet of floor area = 39 parking spaces) on Lot B-1, Princess Anne Plaza, 800 South Lynnhaven Road, Lynnhaven Borough.

Case 11. Gary L. Newton requests a variance of 20.2 feet to a 29.8 foot front yard setback instead of 50 feet as required (residential addition) on Lot 9, Tract C, Section 1, Sandbridge Beach, 2912 Sanddiffer Road, Princess Anne Borough.

Case 12. Elsie Jude requests a variance of 3 feet to 5 foot side yard setbacks (both sides) instead of 8 feet each as required (new residence) on a Parcel, Chesapeake Bay Shores, 2401 Mortons Avenue, Bayside Borough.

Case 13. Pamela D. and V. Alfred Etheridge, Jr. request a variance of 12 feet to an 8 foot front yard setback (83rd Street) instead of 20 feet as required and of 5 feet to a 5 foot rear yard setback (south side) instead of 10 feet as required and of 2 feet in fence height to a 6 foot fence instead of a 6 foot fence as allowed in a required front yard setback (swimming pool) on Lot 1, Block 11, Section 6, Cape Henry, 8210 Oceanfront Avenue, Lynnhaven Borough.

Case 14. Stephen Paul Hobbs requests a variance of 7 feet to a 3 foot rear yard setback instead of 10 feet as required (accessory building - playhouse) on Lot C, Section 1, Powhatan Heights, 3302 MacDonald Road, Kempsville Borough.

Case 15. Sterling Spruill requests a variance of 5.4 feet to a 24.6 foot front yard setback instead of 30 feet as required (enlarge front porch) on Lot 6, Section 2, Kempsville Heights, 5153 Anvers Road, Kempsville Borough.

Case 16. Nancy D. Hays requests a variance of 5 feet 5 inches to a 4 foot 7 inch rear yard setback instead of 10 feet as required (hot tub) on Lot 9, Block O, Section 3, Bellamy Manor Estates, 957 Michaux Court, Kempsville Borough.

Case 17. Vastilios - G. Papadopoulos requests a variance to allow vehicular maneuvering directly incidental to entering or leaving a parking space onto a public street and to allow stack parking where prohibited and of 14% lot coverage to 44% lot coverage instead of 30% lot coverage as allowed on Lots 1 and 2, Block 2, Section A, Ocean Park, 3584 Piedmont Circle, Bayside Borough.

Case 18. H & S Company requests a variance of 8 square feet of sign area to 40 square feet of sign area instead of 32 square feet of sign area as allowed and of 7 feet to a "0" setback for a free-standing sign instead of a 7 foot setback as required (apartment identification sign) on a portion of Parcel (A-4), Resubdivision of Parcel A, Indian River Estates, Section 1, MacDonald Park, 3112 MacDonald Road, Kempsville Borough.

Case 19. Charles N. Kidd requests a variance of 5 feet to a 5 foot side and rear yard setbacks instead of 10 feet each as required and of 3% lot coverage to 43% lot coverage instead of 40% lot coverage as required, Great Neck Meadows, 968 Calypso Lane, Lynnhaven Borough.

Case 20. Mrs. J. Morris requests a variance of 15 feet to a 15 foot setback from Minute Man Road instead of 30 feet as required (swimming pool) and of 2 feet in fence height to a 6 foot fence instead of a 4 foot fence as allowed in a required setback from a street (Minute Man Road) on Lot 19, Block 26, Section 3, Pembroke Manor, 4613 Jericho Road, Bayside Borough.

DEFERRED AGENDA:

Case 1. The Lynn-Dee Motel Corporation requests a variance of 18 parking spaces to 112 parking spaces instead of 130 parking spaces as required (99 unit motel; 2283 square feet of floor area for a restaurant) and to allow 22 parking spaces to be 8 feet wide instead of 9 feet wide as required and to allow 4 handicapped parking spaces instead of 5 handicapped parking spaces as required and to allow the handicapped parking spaces to be 10 feet wide by 18 feet in length instead of 12 feet wide by 18 feet in length as required and of 2 loading spaces instead of 2 loading spaces as required on Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, & Eastern 20 feet of Lot 5, 11, 13, 15 & 17, Block 11, Virginia Beach Development Company, 1002 Atlantic Avenue, Virginia Beach Borough.

REHEARING AGENDA:

Case 1. Walter P. and Helen P. Ehle requests a variance of 2 feet in fence height to a 6 foot fence instead of a 4 foot fence as allowed in a required side yard adjacent to a street (Bosworth Road) on Lot 1, Block W, Section 3, Carollanne Farms, 316 Vaport Road, Kempsville Borough.

Campaign 25

The Portsmouth Times, The Chesapeake Post, The Virginia Beach Sun

Earn as much as you want by selling subscriptions!

Are you, your church or civic group looking for a really worthwhile fund-raising project?

Do you want a quick and easy way to earn hundreds of dollars while at the same time helping to support YOUR city's dedicated, independently-owned community newspaper - the only one with all the pictures, news, features and editorials of most interest to your family and friends? If so, Campaign 25 is the solution.

Admit it. You care about your community, and so do we. And together we can work to make it an even better place in which to live and do business. That's why for every 25 new subscriptions you or your group generates for The Portsmouth Times, The Chesapeake Post or The Virginia Beach Sun, we'll gladly rebate back to you $125, or half-off the regular $10 a year subscription rate. That's a savings of 50%!

In addition, you'll enjoy the pleasure of receiving your hometown newspaper, loaded with all the club news, pictures and ads which mean the most to you, delivered through the mail to your home every week for 52 weeks.

Why not give it a try and join the dozens of other people and groups who have already taken advantage of this campaign. For more details, call 547-4571 or simply stop into any of our newspaper offices and pick up a Campaign 25 sign-up form.

New Beach condos expected by 1987

Governor Gerald Baliles and Mayor Harold Heischober recently broke ground on the $2 million site of the former Tides Hotel, in preparation for the new 10-story hotel condominium, Gateway Tower.

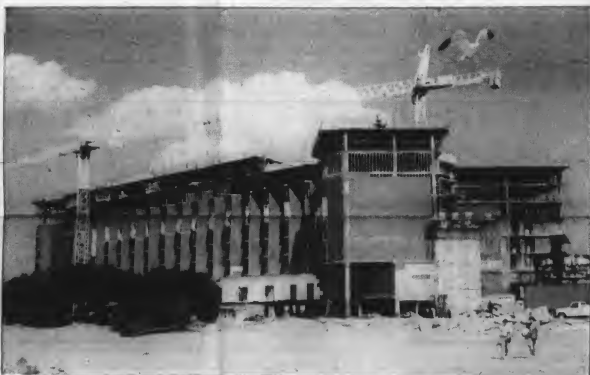

The Tower is expected to be completed by July 1, 1986, and open for the summer of 1987.

The $9.5 million Gateway Tower has 83 units, at a customer cost of around $115,000 per suite. The Tower is franchised with Comfort Inn, a division of Quality Inn.

Timothy E. Barrows, chairman of the Resort Advisory Commission, has recommended the narrowing of paved parking areas on 21st and 22nd streets, allowing for landscaping on both sides of the street. An auto-oriented tourist information and reservation facility is also recommended and would alleviate much of the summer traffic congestion.

The $6 million shopping center planned across from Gateway Tower on 21st Street will face Atlantic Avenue and run north to 22nd Street; west to Pacific Avenue and south to 20th Street. The center will house 40 to 50 shops and will begin construction this summer.

Topping off

Begun in July, 1985, the eight-story Virginia Beach Resort and Conference Center is on schedule for its July 1 opening.

The $36 million resort will be a luxury hotel condominium with meeting, conference, and banquet facilities to accommodate 500 people. Located at 2800 Shore Drive, suites start around $100,000.

Volunteer council awards volunteers

The Virginia Beach Department-Volunteer Council has presented two special awards.

Chief Petty Officer Jeff Hanson, a volunteer with the Mental Retardation/Development Disabilities Programs has been named Outstanding Individual Volunteer.

The Virginia Beach Volunteer Rescue Squads won the Outstanding Ongoing Program award. The rescue squads include more than 430 volunteers.

Recognition is also being given to 12 new Virginia Beach Ambassadors. These are local residents who have actively assisted the Convention Promotion Division of the Department of Economic Development in bringing major convention business to the city.

Psychic Fair Announced

A Psychic Fair will be held on Saturday, April 19, at the Fellowship Center, from 12 to 6 p.m. The Center is located at 620 14th Street at the oceanfront.

Mini-readings, showing character and ability insights and valid counseling suggestions will be featured.

A fee will be charged. Call 428-5782 for more information.

Conflict of Interest ordinance approved

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter

Virginia Beach now has a Conflict of Interest ordinance, but nobody, including the City Council which adopted it Monday, is completely satisfied.

No members of the Mayor's Ethics Committee, which produced the original version of the ordinance, was present. Rae LeSene, chairman of the Council of Civic Organizations took this as an indication of the Committee's dissatisfaction with the final version of the ordinance. Councilwoman Nancy Creech differed with this conclusion, however, at least in the case of one member who had to be out of town, she said. "The committee not in attendance," she said, "is not a boycott."

Two Council members voted against the ordinance because it was not strict enough. Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. said the ordinance did not go as far as it should, and Councilman Robert G. Jones said that his approach is to have an extremely simple and extremely strict ordinance. "I don't think the public has a grasp of the complexity," he said that the ordinance may "lead the public to think something will happen that will not happen...In the name of doing something good (we're) diminishing the willingness of the people to come out for elective office...The public will be losing more...I can't vote for it but I pit works."

Two Council members proposed changes which were not considered by Council, but the members, Councilwomen Barbara Henley and Meyera Oberndorf, supported the ordinance anyway. The ordinance was approved by a 9-2 vote with Jennings and R. Jones dissenting. Council also approved by a 10-1 vote, with R. Jones dissenting, a resolution adopting a code of ethics for the city to apply to all elected and appointed officials.

The ordinance finally adopted was a shortened version of the original ordinance submitted by the Mayor's Ethics Committee including changes with Ethics Committee members said on March 24 they could not support. Chairman Sheldon Corner and member Robert Galewski both said that the ordinance had been watered down to the extent that it was not effective.

Wearable art show opens with fashion-show luncheon in April

"Wearable Art Show," the Virginia Beach Arts Center's exhibition opening April 28, is an annual showcase of hand-made creations by artists from the Textile Designers Association (TDA), a Virginia Beach craftsman.

In conjunction with this unique annual exhibit, the Arts Center will offer a Wearable Art Fashion Show and luncheon, to be held Tuesday, April 22 at the Virginia Beach Plaza Hotel. A preview of TDA original, wearable creations will be modeled before the luncheon, all from noon to 1:30 p.m. Tickets are $15 and may be purchased at the Arts Center.

The wearable art to be displayed in the Arts Center's main galleries is new and recent work that has never been previously shown, according to Virginia Beach artist and TDA President, Rita Rawls.

The wearable art to be modeled at the Tuesday fashion show may include different pieces than those premiere pieces selected for the exhibition. TDA members have been preparing hand-made items such as vests, dresses, skirt and blouse ensembles, coats, purses and robes for the past six months (to show exclusively at the Arts Center).

Variety

These wearable art works are purely original, that is, each item is unique in its construction, use of materials and presentation. A variety of motifs may be seen, including garments with an Indian, Chinese, or Japanese flair, suggested by how a piece is worn, or by the origin of the fabric and design. Tibetan coats, Japanese kimonos, Indian vests, and even funky American hip-inspired outfits with a 1960s flair are included in this eclectic show, all on view through Sunday, May 18.

A multi-colored cotton "Othello Coat," by Rita Rawls, is a huge, loose-fitting robe made without fabric cuts and only two seams so that it flows around the body. Although it has no ethnic origin, the Othello Coat gets its name because it vaguely resembles a Shakespearean dress robe. Rawls' coat is brightly striped and fringed and has a hand-knit woolen Peruvian mother doll sewn on the back. Two small children dolls are sewn clinging to their mother's colorful skirts. Rawls will also exhibit tiny silk and brocade purses with patchwork surfaces and silk tassels. The purses, which measure under seven or eight inches square, are meticulously sewn in jewel tones like deep plums, wines and blues.

One piece to be modeled in the fashion show, "Seminole Jacket," by Virginia Beach artist Suzanne Driver, is a luxurious hip-length women's coat in magenta cotton velveteen. The blazer has silk horizontal stripes piece has silk horizontal stripes across the front and back and a patterned silk lining as well. Driver will also exhibit a circus-inspired black cotton vest which has three dimensional fabric clouds sewn on its surface. The craftsmanship of these pieces is meticulous with careful attention to every detail.

Most TDA fiber artists use only high-quality, natural fabrics such as cotton, silk, linen, and wool. Many artists also import special fabrics, valued for their original design, pattern or texture.

"Wearable Art Show" will be on view at the Arts Center from May 28 through May 18. Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday 1 to 4 p.m. The galleries are free and open to the public.

Christian singing set for Fort Story

International Christian singer Bobby Michaels will perform at Fort Story, on Wednesday, April 23.

Michaels, a recording artist with WORD Records, will perform at 4:30 p.m. at the 11th Battalion Dining Facility on Fort Story.

Michaels recently completed a world tour that included the U.S., Europe, the Orient and South Africa. His newest album, "I Have a Reason," is dedicated to the men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces.

The concerts are open to the public.

Candidates breakfast scheduled

Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce-Virginia Beach will sponsor a Political Candidates Breakfast on Friday, April 25 at 7:30 a.m. at the Virginia Beach Plaza Hotel, 4453 Bonney Rd.

The program will provide an opportunity for citizens to hear Virginia Beach City Council candidates present their views on local issues. All 16 candidates will attend.

The $10 per person cost will include breakfast. Reservations must be made before April 22. For reservations or more information call Ann Ege, 490-1221.

Lynnhaven House ready for season

Lynnhaven House will open its doors to visitors for the season on Tuesday, April 22. The eighteenth-century brick plantation home will be featured on Garden Week's Princess Anne Tour day, Thursday, April 24.

The small, but stately, story and a half dwelling, with its dormers and distinctive massive chimneys, is an architectural treat and its furnishings and surroundings recreate the colonial atmosphere of Old Princess Anne County. Eighteenth century activities, such as spinning and weaving, hearth cooking, candle making, historic re-enactments and other special events are scheduled throughout the season.

Admission for the Princess Anne Day Tour is included in the block ticket for Thursday of Garden Week. The House is open from noon until 4 p.m. Tuesdays Through Sundays. Admission is charged at the door. For group tour information, call 464-4990 or 460-1688. The House is located at 4405 Wishart Road off Independence Boulevard.

Litter Awareness Week set

The Virginia Beach Clean Community Commission will hold its Fifth Annual Litter Awareness Week at Lynnhaven Mall April 20 through April 26.

Throughout the week area businesses and organizations will display exhibits on litter control, recycling and beautification. Litter art and posters created by public school students K-12 will also be displayed throughout the week.

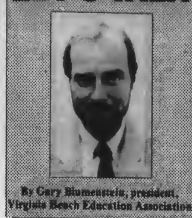

Saturday, April 26, is designated Children's Day. Free live entertainment, including the Sunshine Puppets, Feedbag the Clown and Lynn Ruehlmann, a musical storyteller, will highlight the day's events. The center court shows will begin at 11 a.m. and conclude at 4 p.m. The City's Litter Critters-Rid-it the Frog, the Anti-Litterbug, Ogden Oak, Flashy Trashy and Leonard Dragon will be visiting the mall throughout the day with giveaways.

April 26 is also the day for the Second Annual Great Scout Recycling Challenge at Lynnhaven Mall. In conjunction with Clean Community Month, Virginia Beach Girl and Boy Scouts will be collecting newspapers for this challenge. They will be accepting newspapers between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. outside the back Thalmires entrance.

For more information concerning Children's Day, including specific entertainment times and the Scout newspaper drive, call Virginia Beach Clean Community Commission at 427-4104.

Teachers, most of all, should be political

By Gary Blumenthal, president, Virginia Beach Education Association

Of the more sensitive issues that exists, both in and out of the Association and the profession at large, is whether or not teachers should be actively involved in politics.

Of course, everyone should vote. That's a right and responsibility of free citizens in a democratic society. But beyond that, the scope of opinion ranges from, "Teachers don't belong in the political arena," to "Teachers have a right and a responsibility to be involved in the political process from candidate selection to campaign involvement and even running for office."

Some politicians don't believe that teachers belong in the political process and support legislation that would specifically prohibit them from being involved in partisan politics. The more effective educators become in the political arena, the more we see this type of legislation surface. This is somewhat understandable in light of the fact that 90% of the House of Delegates candidates endorsed by VEA in the last education won; and that VEA endorsed candidates won a clean sweep in the statewide races in the same elections. As a result of these victories, lobbying by teachers and teacher staff becomes a much more viable effort during the sessions of the General Assembly.

The effort to get members politically involved over the last 20 to 25 years has been using the following axiom in its appeal for membership participation:

Educational Decisions Are Political Decisions!

- Politics and politicians decide the wages we are paid, the days we must work, when we start school and the age we must retire;
- Politics and politicians control our benefits from insurance, workers compensation, unemployment compensation and retirement;
- Politics and politicians appoint school board members and control legislation which affects education and educators;
- Politics and politicians decide how many pupils will be in our classes and what legal responsibility we have for them;
- Politics and politicians hand out the federal funds on which our local school division depends;
- Politics and politicians determine the amount of state funds our school division receives and how it will be used.

Politics And Politicians Control The Future Of Education!

Many politicians actively and

sincerely support quality education; some do not. Many politicians talk a good line; with some, that's all it is — talk. For decades, teachers were quiet, even subservient, when it came to discussing public issues. No more. Even with the discontent and disagreement within our own ranks, teachers are in politics to stay. Politicians know we are here. They seek our support and we are ready to give support to those recognized as friends of education and educators.

The VBEA-Political Action Committee for Educators met last week to endorse certain candidates for the Virginia Beach

City Council. Candidate endorsement is seldom, if ever, a matter of unanimous effort of those involved and of those members evaluating the results. Someone gets upset. Like most PACs, VBEA-PACE makes endorsements based upon criteria that most affects its membership. This is why members contribute to a PAC fund.

In summary, former Congressman James G. O'Hara told the NEA Representative Assembly:

I hope that you have all unlearned the advice so earnestly given to you by doctors, lawyers, bankers and presidents to the effect that there ought to be one profession which remained above the lure of money and that it ought to be yours, not theirs.

Politics is the way we decide how much of our public money you — and the children you teach — are worth. And if you don't get into politics with both feet, someone else is going to make that decision for you.

Review by Toni Lohman

The Maul And The Pear Tree

The Maul and The Pear Tree: The Ratcliffe Highway Murders 1811 by P.D. James and T.A. Critchley. Mysterious Press, New York, 1971.

P. D. James, a British mystery writer, best known for her Inspector Dalgligh novels, turns her attention to a real murder in her new work The Maul and The Pear Tree.

James, along with T. A. Critchley a former London police officer, examines the Ratcliffe Highway murders, a series of gruesome killings in the London of 1811. The resulting work is a fascinating blend of modern day police techniques applied to painstakingly detailed historical research, which results in a startlingly new conclusion to an old mystery.

Ratcliffe Highway in Regency London was an unsavory area next to the docks. It was just beginning to gain respectability as middle class tradesmen started moving in to live and to set up their shops. This renaissance was temporarily halted, however, with the grisly murder of a respectable shopkeeper, his wife, infant son and shop boy. All were brutally beaten and their throats slashed. Twelve days later, a pub owner, his wife and servant were similarly murdered.

The officials of 1811 London who investigated were severely limited in their ability to deal with the murders and the resulting public out cry. The police force was virtually nonexistent with minimal protection provided by night watchmen who were generally elderly or infirm and could find no other work. Magistrates and a primitive and thinly spread police force, also provided public order. None of these agencies had developed either rudimentary investigation techniques and they jealously guarded their own duties. All three agencies became involved in the investigation with little sharing of information or evidence taking place.

Gradually suspicion centered on John Williams a seaman who lived in the area. Circumstantial evidence, testimony of disreputable witnesses and the increasing public uproar resulted in his being jailed where he supposedly committed suicide.

James and Critchley use frequent accounts from the official records and newspaper accounts to indicate exactly how the investigation progressed. The result is a fascinating and terrifying look at a prejudice, ignorance, and corruption can make a mockery of justice. In a convincing conclusion, they show how Williams was probably framed; and by using modern investigative methods indicate who the murderers really were.

The Maul and The Pear Tree is not only a well-written history of a subject, it is an enlightening view of the infancy of the modern police force. This thought provoking account makes the reader very thankful for the many safe guards of the modern criminal justice system. — Toni Lohman.

A sick tree will let you know

The Urban Forest

By Paul Revel
State Forester

Now that spring is here, many Virginia Beach residents will be out in their yards planting new trees or caring for those they already have. So this week I will offer some tree health tips intended to maintain and beautify these important assets on your property.

Water Deeply

With a new tree, be sure to follow your nurseryman's planting instructions carefully. After proper planting, water is the most important ingredient to a tree's health. Trees should be watered regularly and deeply. Deep watering is much better than many tiny sprinklings that only wet the top layer of soil and encourage roots to grow toward the surface. If you are watering with a hose, turn it on so that a gentle stream flows out. Don't use a nozzle because strong blasts of water will gouge holes in the soil. In very hot weather, a tree may need more water. Look for signs of wilting: leaves lose their shine, droop or fall off. If the soil is dry, water again. Older trees should only be watered during hot dry weather, with a thorough soaking once a week.

Cultivate the soil surrounding your tree regularly with a hand cultivator or stick to loosen the top two inches of soil. This eliminates grass and weeds and lets water and air reach the roots.

Protect your tree from chemicals and never pour any chemical used for another purpose on the soil around your tree.

Keep bicycle chains, nails, wires, tools and lawnmower blades away from the tree trunk and also protect younger trees from dogs since their waste is harmful to trees. Use protective devices around younger trees in high traffic areas.

A sick tree will let you know it's in trouble. Look for many dead twigs, dwarfed or yellow leaves, sparse foliage. If you see these signs, take action promptly. Treat wounds immediately by trimming away loose bark around the injury and removing softened or discolored wood. Shape the wound into a vertical oval if you can, making a clean edge between the healthy bark and the exposed wood.

Tree Wounds

Tree wound dressings are not necessary, and may be harmful if applied too thickly. The tree will produce its own wound dressing and most wounds will close rapidly.

When adding new pavement or utility trenches or making home repairs, be careful that roots are not severed or that soil is not compacted over roots by building materials or equipment.

Discuss insect and disease problems promptly with your nurseryman.

Fertilizers may be applied to stimulate growth. However, if the tree is healthy and vigorous, fertilizer is probably unnecessary. Apply three pounds of total bulk 13-13-13 per inch of trunk diameter. Fertilizer may be broadcast on top of bare ground around small trees, or applied in holes in the ground around larger trees. Do no over-fertilize!

Spring is here! Support your local nurseryman. Buy and plant a tree. Some thoughts on tree selection in future columns.

Local, regional dancers to perform

The International Dance Festival-Expo '86 will highlight innovation and artistry in dance April 24 through 27 (Thursday through Sunday) — in Virginia Beach.

The event, sponsored by the Performing Arts Unit of the Parks and Recreation Department, will feature a variety of talented performers from local and regional dance troupes. Performances will begin at 8 p.m. April 24, 25 and 26 and at 3 p.m. on April 27 at the Kempsville Recreation Center Playhouse.

Featured will be guest artist David Smith, former professional dancer, in a special number choreographed by his wife Mara Ifju, dancer, teacher and choreographer. Smith, an architect and Hampton University teacher, will perform with members of the Chamber Ballet of Williamsburg in this special five-section piece featuring Hungarian folk songs and part of Beethoven's Ghost Trio.

Ifju, who is recently from New York City, has performed locally with Esprit Dance Company, and with the Academy Dance Theatre of Williamsburg. She taught jazz at the Region II Governor's Magnet School for the gifted, is now teaching ballet for Hampton University's Community Dance program, and is on the faculty of the Chamber Ballet of Williamsburg.

As another special feature of the festival, the Chamber Ballet of Williamsburg, under direction of Heidi Robitshek, and the Hampton University Terpsichorions will combine their talents for the premiere performance on April 24. On the program will be selections choreographed to Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 4 in D Major Opus 58, the ballet "Coppelia," a Rag Time Dance and more.

The Contemporary Ballet Theatre of Williamsburg, with Juan Valqui as artistic director and Sandra Balestracci as administrative director, will perform their magic at 3 p.m. on April 27. Valqui is an accomplished dancer, teacher and choreographer who has performed in Europe and South America as well as the States. He has appeared and choreographed with the Stars of the Bolshoi Ballet and the Dance Company of Harlem. Balestracci has studied at the School of Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and the American Ballet Theatre School in New York City. Her classical repertoire includes roles in the ballets "Sleeping Beauty" and "The Nutcracker." She has taught many master classes, workshops and seminars throughout the U.S. and in South America.

Perlo/Bloom and Company, a modern dance touring company, will add a contemporary flair to the festival. Co-founded by Carla Perlo, choreographer, and Steve Bloom, composer, this company tours seasonally and has been funded by a variety of cultural organizations.

Lesa McLaughlin and Dancers will also be a featured act at the festival. McLaughlin's work was featured in a recent issue of Smithsonian Magazine. In addition to directing her own company, she is the managing director of Dance Place/Takoma and is teaching at George Mason University.

Performances by the Virginia Beach Music in Motion Dance Company will add a local note to the festival. Co-artistic directors Judith Hatcher and Darlene Kelley will present "Childsong," danced to the music of Neil Diamond and featuring sign language by the Tidewater Association for the Hearing Impaired. Rounding out their program will be a modern dance duet.

Admission to all performances is free. For further information, call Performing Arts at 471-4884.

issued for individual counties and include the tornado's location and its direction and speed. If you are in or near its path, take cover immediately.

A tornado usually develops from a severe thunderstorm. During such weather, be alert for violent winds, hail, heavy rain, frequent lightning, funnel-shaped clouds, and a roaring noise. When in doubt, take cover; tornadoes are often hidden by rain or dust and can occur at night.

Both tornado watches and warnings are issued by the National Weather Service through local radio and television stations. Many communities also have special warning systems such as sirens. Be alert to weather advisories, and be prepared to take immediate action.

Beach students win regional honors

Seven Virginia Beach students won the right to participate in statewide Home Economics Related Occupations (HERO)/Future Homemakers of America (FHA) contests this month by receiving the highest awards in regional contests held recently at Cox High School.

In the HERO Proficiency events, students compete in Child Care, Culinary Arts, and Clothing Design categories. Their entries are judged on originality, mastery of skills, presentation, and degree of difficulty.

Paula Hendershot won the highest award, a rosette, in the Puppet division of Child Care competition. She also won the Special Judges' Award for her entry. Elizabeth Kelly was awarded a rosette in the Illustrated Stories division of the Child Care competition. Anita Mathewson received a rosette award in the Dresses-Day or Evening (Advanced) division of the Clothing Design category and the Judges' Award. In the Chaux Paste, Danish Pastry, and Puff Pastry Variations division of the Culinary Arts competition, Christine Powryka won the rosette award.

Hendershot, Kelly, Mathewson, and Powryka are all students at the Virginia Beach Vocational-Technical Educational Center.

In the Students Taking Action for Recognition (STAR) competition, Michael Bushey, a student at Virginia Beach Junior High School, won the top honor, a three-STAR with rosette, in the Junior Division of the Illustrated Talks event. Anne Pasley of Cox High School won the top honor in the Senior Division of the same event. Kristen Dowdell, another student at Virginia Beach Junior High School, was awarded a three-

STAR with rosette in the Manual Division of the Chapter Activities event.

The STAR events are designed to help students develop leadership skills, become involved in chapter projects, and obtain career preparation skills.

The seven rosette winners in regional competition will compete in their respective categories for statewide honors on April 12. Two other Virginia Beach students were given high awards, but will not take part in statewide competition. In the Junior Division of the Job Application and Interview STAR event, Agnes Parker of Cox High School won a three-STAR award, and in the Display Division of the Chapter Activities STAR event, Lisa Ritzel, a student at the Vocational-Technical Educational Center, won a two-STAR award.

About 400 students from the cities of Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake, Virginia Beach, Newport News, and Hampton and from King and Queen, Gloucester, Southampton, King William, Northampton, Essex, and Surry counties participated in the southeastern regional competition.

NOTICE OF TAX INCREASE

The City of Virginia Beach proposes to increase real property tax levies. However, the City Manager's proposed Operating Budget does not include an increase in the current tax rate of $.80 per $100 of assessed value.

1. Assessment Increase: Total assessed value of real property, excluding additional assessments due to new construction or improvements to property, exceeds last year's total assessed value of real property by 6.22 percent.

2. Lowered Rate Necessary to Offset Increased Assessment: The tax rate which would levy the same amount of real estate tax as last year, when multiplied by the new total assessed value of real estate with the exclusions mentioned above, would be $.75 per $100 of assessed value. This rate will be known as the "lowered tax rate."

3. Effective Rate Increase: The City of Virginia Beach proposes to adopt a tax rate of $.80 per $100 of assessed value. The difference between the lowered tax rate and the proposed rate would be $.05 per $100, or 6.67 percent. This difference will be known as the "effective tax rate increase."

Individual property taxes may, however, increase at a percentage greater than or less than the above percentage.

A public hearing on the increase will be held on Tuesday, April 29, 1986 at 7:00 p.m. at the Pavilion.

All hearings shall be open to the public. City Council shall permit persons desiring to be heard an opportunity to present oral testimony within such reasonable time limits as shall be determined by City Council.

All interested parties are invited to be present at the time and place aforementioned. Individuals desiring to provide oral comment should register with the City Clerk's Office before the hearing begins. The City Clerk may be contacted at the office on the second floor of the City Hall Building or by calling 427-4303.

Baxter Road flyover ok'ed

Virginia Beach City Manager Thome H. Muehlenbeck has announced that the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation has agreed to begin work on the design and construction of the Route 44 exit ramp at Independence Boulevard and the Baxter Road flyover. Construction will be an extension of toll road improvements and will be funded with toll revenues.

This project will also include some improvements to the portion of Independence Boulevard underneath the Route 44 bridge. In addition, the State agreed to include the Constitution Drive Extended project in its Six Year Improvement Program.

Muehlenbeck stated his pleasure with the Commonwealth's agreement "This state road improvement project will help alleviate serious traffic congestion at this major intersection. We look forward to cooperating with the Commonwealth in seeking further solutions to Virginia Beach's road problems."

Project schedule for this road construction have not yet been announced by the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation. For further information contact the Virginia Beach City Engineer Donald R. Trueblood at 427-4131.

Lifeguards needed

Fort Eustis in Newport News and its subinstallation, Fort Story in Virginia Beach are looking for teenagers and college students interested in working as lifeguards at the posts from May 23 to Sept. 1.

Applicants must possess a current American Red Cross Advanced Senior Lifesaving Certificate and be at least 16 years old. Wages are competitive.

For further information, call 878-5386 or 878-2238.

What do you mean no tax increase?

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

No tax increase? Try telling that to some of the Virginia Beach taxpayers.

While city officials are busy patting themselves on the back because no tax rate increase has been necessary for the past five (including the upcoming 1986-87) Operating Budgets, taxpayers are looking at higher assessments on their property which translates into higher taxes.

That's why it takes some citizens to read that the Operating Budget proposed by City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck recently recommends no tax rate increase for the fifth year in a row. One citizen called to say that the statement gives the wrong impression, the impression that citizens won't be paying higher taxes, and this one expects to be paying more because his home was reassessed this year at $19,000 more than last year.

He asked that his name not be used, because, he said, "they may stop my garbage collection." He said that all the city has done since he moved here in 1950 was cut the garbage collection down from twice to once a week.

The land he purchased in 1967 on 46th Street between Atlantic and Ocean Avenues for $6,000, he said, is now assessed at $120,000. In 1967 he paid $136 in real estate taxes on his home. Last year he paid $1400.

His home was not only reassessed upward this year, but also previous years. In 1985, it went up $13,000; in 1984, $5400, and in 1983, $22,000.

Of course the caller is one of those fortunate or unfortunate people who lives near the water. Waterfront property in Virginia Beach accelerates in value faster than other property.

The 46th Street resident said that many of his neighbors are retired persons, but every year the taxes go up.

Miles elected

Stephanie L. Miles has been elected secretary of the Tidewater Chapter - Society of Architectural Administrators.

Mrs. Miles is employed as Secretary of Dillissinscough-Duff Partnership in Virginia Beach.

Pluck & Perseverance

Love of labor

G & S applies warehouse concept

Equipment company prez adds warehouse line

When Walter H. Young bought G & S Equipment Company, Inc. five months ago it was a traditional International Harvester (recently merged with Case) dealership. Other lines, such as Homelite, makers of chainsaws, pumps and generators, were carried. Young, a 33 year-old Hampton-Sydney educated economist, has now added his own touch.

By adding Central Tractor to his multiple dealer lines he is able to put into practice a business concept most tractor parts dealers find enviable. Central Tractor, a nationwide, Iowa-based parts, accessories, and hardware distributorship, has given him access to 40,000 items—from bedliners to tool boxes, from nuts and bolts to toys for the children.

"Although large component parts—such as rear-end or driveline—must still be ordered from the factory. Most of the rest we have."

Young, who purchased G & S from S. F. Scott five years after Scott's long-time partner, Lewis P. Gibson had retired, still intends to carry the banner of Case tractor sales and service. But, he says, the 34 year-old company will rise to meet even greater market demands.

"I'm now able to draw from upwards of 100 miles away...because nobody really has what I have," Young says.

If Young's business practices appear thoroughly modern, his personal demeanor is quite the opposite. The son of a retired Secret Service agent, Young's only activity outside of work and family, is an occasional game of tennis or golf.

"I keep a low profile, work hard, and save my money," he says, the words of a true Gibson and Scott (G & S) successor.

Young and his wife, Becky, live in Virginia Beach with their two daughters, Katie and Kelly, both toddlers. Becky, a graduate of the University of Richmond, is office manager for the law offices of Hutton and Williams.

And, by establishing a Farm and Family Center to the Central Tractor franchise line, Young has expanded his marketing horizon to include "pickup truck owner, suburban homeowner, and anybody else who needs warehouse-priced tractor parts, truck accessories, and sundry hardware."

"We have parts for every make of tractor," says Young.

Gardening offers joy, food

Gardening has become one of America's favorite pastimes and the number of gardens is expected to increase significantly this year. There are many reasons why people will be growing their own vegetables this year.

A lot of newcomers to vegetable gardening will be given their impetus by the high cost of fresh produce after this winter's severe weather. With a little skillful planning and good luck these novices may well show a profit from their vegetable garden, particularly if they count the many hours of healthy recreation that comes with vegetable gardening at no extra charge—quite a savings over the cost of movies and golfing.

But many more people will be gardening for other than economic reasons. The taste of corn harvested while the water is starting to boil on the stove, a ripe tomato still warm from the summer sun, fresh peas eaten raw while working the garden—these are among the garden's rewards for hard work.

Less tangible rewards come with the pleasure of sharing the produce with a friend or the satisfaction of turning a weedy plot of land into a productive garden.

One gardener of 73 years, explaining a lifetime of pleasure in gardening, summarized the feeling of people who garden, "It's just fun to watch things grow and to know I helped."

April is termite season

April is the beginning of the termite swarming and time to keep your eyes open for flying termites around your home. This swarming season usually extends through June but activity is greatest in late March or April.

Subterranean termites are sometimes called white ants or are mistaken for flying ants. They are most numerous in moist, warm soil containing an abundance of wood or other cellulose material.

Damage to wood buildings is not often evident from the outside because the termites eat the inner part of the wood and leave a thin outer layer of wood intact.

An infestation can often be discovered by jabbing at suspected damaged timbers with a pocket knife or screwdriver.

Often the first time you notice their presence is when the winged termites emerge from a building or nearby soil. After a warm spell and a light rain they will usually appear and you may find them gathering around a window in the basement, in an upstairs room, outside your house or around the porch. You can find them almost anywhere.

The problem is that once you discover the emerging termites you can then know that they have been in the wood from two to four years. They will continue to swarm from your home each year if you don't control them.

If you do discover termites in your home do not panic; the house or floor will not fall in. Call at least two pest control operators before you decide who you want to take care of the problem. Find out what chemical they are using (you may have a choice), how they plan to apply it and how much it will cost.

In the past Chlorodane has been the most commonly used chemical for preventing and controlling termites. It has been effective in protecting wood for 36 years.

There are three new chemicals that have come onto the market in the last few years. These are Dursban TC, Torpedo and Dragnet.

Proper plans make successful gardening...

Whatever your reason for gardening, the first step to success is planning. One of the biggest mistakes that many people make is planning a garden that is too large. This creates more work than can be done comfortably in those hot months of July and August. It also creates more produce than can be given to the neighbors, the guys at the offices or the girls in the car pool...that is, unless the weeds completely take over and little or nothing is harvested.

While planning your garden, it is important to ask a few basic questions.

Who will be doing the work? Will the garden be a group project with family members or friends who will be willing to work through the season to a fall harvest; or, will you be handling the hoe alone—in between camping and swimming?

What do you and your family like to eat? Although the pictures in the garden catalog look delicious, there is no value in taking up gardening space with vegetables that no one eats. Make a list of your family's favorite vegetables, ranked in order of preference. This will make a useful guide to use when deciding how much to plant. Successive planting of certain crops, such as beans, will give you a longer harvest period and increase your yield.

How do you plan to use the produce from your garden? If you plan to can, freeze, or store part of the produce this will be a factor not only in planning the size of your garden but also in selecting the varieties you grow.

Jay E. Mears

company's chief horticulturists, is this week's Almanac columnist. If you have a problem that won't wait, you may call Mr. Mears at his office: 464-5564.

I cannot keep my climbing roses alive. I've tried all sorts of locations, all types of soil, what do I do? Also, how far away from a climbing stake should I plant? Full sun? Shade? I've gotten many different suggestions. Please help.

Generally, climbing roses are just as hardy as non-climbers. They need all the sun they can get at least six hours a day, and they really are that particular about soil conditions. As a rule, equal parts peatmoss, perlite, mixed with existing soil in the planting area is good. They do prefer a near neutral pH (6.0-7.0). Roses perform best with a regular feeding program also, such as a good slow-release granular fertilizer (12-4-8) supplement periodically with a fast release liquid fertilizer such as Miracle-Gro for Roses. Climbing Roses don't cling to things by themselves for support, so some training and tying to a trellis, arbor, or fence is required. Plant as close as possible to your rose support. Also, one mistake many first timers make with climbers is pruning too severely early in the season. Climbers are best pruned after flowering in the spring as flowers come from two and three year old canes.

My photinia is growing tall and wild. I've trimmed the sides for several years, but not the tops. Now they're dropped over, and many died during the winter. Should I replant them all over again—or can I prune and retrain? Also, what is the best method to plant and train? We inherited the photinia hedge with property.

Photinia - (sometimes called red-tops) is today probably the most popular hedge plant for Tidewater. They respond very well to regular pruning, but that means pruning the tops as well as the sides. At this point I would recommend cutting your plants back at least half way or more and fertilize. It's still early enough in the season for you to get plenty of new growth to begin "re-building." For every one foot of new growth prune back one third and you will grow nice full-strong plants. As for the ones that died - are you sure they are dead? Since you never pruned the tops - I'm sure your plants must be quite tall now and typically photinia will become bare at the bottom if a good pruning program isn't followed. Check to see if they are green at the base of the trunk under the outer layer of bark. If so, your plant is OK and just prune back with the rest of your hedge.

Rather than completely re-topsoil our lawn, my husband has simply spread a thin layer of carth throughout the yard and reseeded. Is this advisable? Will it work? We weed & seeded prior to this venture—or adventure.

You used the term weed and seed - I think you meant weed and feed and if that's the case, no it probably won't work. The herbicide found in most weed and feed products is too strong for new seed. You must wait six weeks before using weed and feed on a new lawn. As for the topsoil, a better approach would have been to kill of existing weeds with Round-up, spread lime (most soil in Tidewater is too acidic) and till four to six inches deep. Next, take smooth seed, fertilize with a good starter fertilizer and keep the top layer of soil moist until your new lawn begins to germinate. The ideal time for establishing new lawns in Tidewater is fall - mid-September to mid October.

Beach 4-Her's win top Aggie Award

The Virginia Beach 4-H Livestock Club has won the Virginia Agriculture Promotion Award.

The $100 award and engraved plaque were presented at the recent Friends of the Industry of Agriculture Banquet held in Richmond.

Virginia 4-H Clubs and Future Farmers of America (FFA) Chapters competed for the award, sponsored by the Virginia Agriculture Week Committee.

The club's winning entry featured promotions at the Pango Strawberry Festival, the Neptune Festival Country Fair Day, and the 4-H Livestock Show at the Chesapeake Jubilee.

Club members also held a petting zoo at Creeds Elementary School, participated in 4-H Sunday at Charity United Methodist Church, and served as counselors at the Virginia Beach 4-H Junior Camp.

LEGAL NOTICES

George W. Vakos, Complainant v. Henry Doumar, a/k/a Henry T. Doumar; Vivian G. Doumar; Richard Doumar; Ronald Doumar

And Parties unknown, being more particularly described as the spouses, widows, widowers, heirs, devisees, personal representatives and successors in title, if any, of Henry Doumar, a/k/a Henry T. Doumar, Vivian G. Doumar, Richard Doumar and Ronald Doumar, the issue, if any, of Maurice Doumar, a/k/a Maurice Doumar, and such other persons who may have an interest in the property which is the subject matter of this cause, all of whom are made parties defendant by the general description of Parties Unknown, Defendants.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of the above-styled cause is to effect partition among the owners, by sale, allotment or otherwise, of the real property described as follows:

ALL THAT CERTAIN lot of land, with the improvements thereon, situated in the City of Virginia Beach (formerly Princess Anne County), State of Virginia, known, designated and numbered as Lot Number one (1) in Block Three (3); said lot having an aggregate frontage of 34.03 feet on the North side of 29th Street running back between parallel lines 140 feet, as shown on that certain plat entitled "Map of Central Park, Inc., Va. Beach, Va.," dated May 31, 1926, made by J. M. Baldwin, C. E., which plat is duly recorded in the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach (formerly Princess Anne County), Virginia, in Map Book 8, at page 10, together with all right, title and interest, if any, in and to the unnamed land twenty feet (20') in width adjacent to the northern line of the above-described property as shown on the aforesaid plat.

And it appearing from the Bill of Complaint and by the Affidavit duly filed: (1) that Henry Doumar, a/k/a Henry T. Doumar, is not a resident of the Commonwealth of Virginia; (2) that the last known address of Ronald Doumar is in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia; (3) that some of the potential defendants and their addresses are unknown, as shown in the caption of this Order of Publication; and (4) that some of the defendants may have died leaving heirs, devisees or personal representatives, all of whom are unknown and that there are or might be persons other than those named in the Bill of Complaint interested in the real estate to be disposed of in this suit whose names and post office addresses are unknown and who have been designated as "Parties Unknown" in the Bill of Complaint.

It is, therefore, ORDERED that the above-named persons, if living, and if dead, their heirs, devisees and personal representatives and if married, their respective consorts, and all persons other than these herein named who are or might be interested in the real estate to be disposed of in this suit, whose names are unknown, and who are made defendants by the general description of "Parties Unknown," do appear on or before May 16, 1986, and do what is necessary to protect their interest. It is further ordered that the foregoing portion of this Order be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks in the Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper of general circulation in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia.

J. Curtis Fruit, Clerk By Phyllis N. Styron, D.C. Thomas C. Broyles, Counsel for Complainant 247-1441 4-23 VB

Conflict of Interest

finances and suggestions received into one document, presented the version adopted, which had been revised since March 24 to reflect even more suggestions.

McClanan also has reservations about the ordinance, but considers it an interim document on which changes will be made in the future.

When asked by a speaker Monday, Constant-Davis, whether she considered the document temporary, McClanan replied, "that's my thought."

What the city has is an ordinance that:

Defines personal interest as meaning a personal and/or financial benefit.

Requires disclosures:

Of business entities with which the official has had business during the past year or expects to obtain or purchase during the current year services in billing amounts of $5,000 or more and products or materials in billing amounts of $15,000 or more.

Transactions involving zoning. Business entities from which the office also had received $2,000 or more during the past year and expects to receive during the current year.

Real estate in Virginia Beach and adjoining cities and counties.

Political contributions of more than $500.

Gifts of a cumulative value of $250 or more. Excluded will be ceremonial gifts or awards, reasonable expenses for food, travel, lodging and scheduled entertainment of the official at a meeting, gifts from relatives or members of his household or honorariums or awards for professional achievement.

Enforcement will be left to a three-member committee appointed by Council and a legal advisor prosecutor. If the legal advisor finds sufficient evidence to prosecute the official, he or she will go to the magistrate for a warrant or to the grand jury for an indictment on a charge of malfeasance of office. Upon conviction, the sentence may be up to one year in jail and/or a fine of up to $1,000 and the forfeiture of the office.

Henley would have deleted under business ownership or participation, the portion which expects transaction where the other officer, director or partner is merely representing a third party before the public body and the public official has no personal interest with said third party.

She would change the disclosure limit for gifts to $100.

She would reinstate the standing Ethics Committee recommended by the Mayor's Committee. She said she is confused by the role of the legal advisor/prosecutor, appointed by City Council, especially since one section allows the legal advisor/prosecutor total discretion of whether to pursue prosecution and even after the committee has determined a finding of just cause to prosecute. The Mayor's Committee recommended a five-member Standing Ethics Committee. The deletion of this committee or its reduction to three members were opposed by the Mayor's Committee.

Oberndorf, who said that the ordinance is better than no ordinance at all, wanted to include under the law the special legal advisor/prosecutor and the members of the Conflict of Interest Advisory Committee.

She also said that to exclude persons from the committee because they are active members of any political party is not wise would be difficult to determine.

She also supported the five member committee with decisions based on a majority, rather than a unanimous vote.

She also wanted the inclusion of the third party references in the disclosures statement.

Among her suggestions she also wanted listed contributions, not only to the most recent elections, but financial statements currently active with the State Board of Elections to cover long-term debts.

Oberndorf would have to return to the original $100 limit on gifts also.

LeSene said that the great fanfare and great expectation surround the Conflicts of Interests ordinance. He said the Mayor's Committee gave their best and endorsed the committee's original proposal.

He said that the ability of the Conflict of Interests Advisory Committee's ability to act is limited by the legal advisor prosecutor and the reduction in its size. "If you can't see your way clear to adopting the one proposed by the Mayor's Committee," he said, "adopt this one."

Georgette Constant-Davis, objected to having City Council appoint the three-member committee.

Councilman Louis R. Jones explained that the city government is governed by the State Code. He said there may also be a question as to why Council should be passing an ordinance which affects Council. He said that Council can eliminate the ordinance altogether. "We may not do everything you want," he said, "but it's a start."

Vice Mayor Reba McClanan said that nobody else really wants the authority to appoint the committee. "We're talking about giving a city committee a partly judicial position." She said that she understands that the city can ask the General Assembly to allow the Circuit Court to make the appointments and that having the Council make the appointments is an interim mechanism. The judges said they do not have the authority, McClanan said, and "I don't think they want it."

When Constant-Davis suggested appointments by someone other than Council, such as the city manager, Jones replied, "He works for us. It's unlikely he's going to appoint anyone who will get his bosses in trouble." The city manager also is covered by the ordinance.

Robert Jones said, "We're responsible to the people. There is no one else to appeal to. This is exactly the right way to do it, he said."

Jennings said that he has been reluctant to speak out because it was an "exercise in futility." "There's no way I'm going to be in support of the COI ordinance, not because I have great concerns about its strictness, but because it doesn't go as far as it should."

Jennings then lambasted the treatment by the press of his ties as an insurance agent to the building industry.

"Every time the subject matter comes up a new reporter on the scene...through the revolving door...regurgitates my (assumed) conflict of interests."

He repeated remarks he made at another meeting that no ordinance could be too strict and that he would find it easy enough to perform his duties under the ordinance. He lamented the omission of requiring as a disclosure the official's IRS return, but said that the worst thing about the ordinance is the public's perception that they are being protected.

He criticized a newspaper editorial that stated that it took a news story to reveal information on Jennings' business transactions when he had asked the attorney general for a ruling on possible conflicts before he was elected.

"Everybody knew of my involvement," he said, "but maybe we're not concerned with the facts."

Councilman John A. Baum said that the original ordinance was extremely long and the revised version is a good start. He said that he sympathized with Jennings in that he was tried by the press. He said he could not agree that perception be greater than the reality.

He then said that he saw a conflict in the candidacy of John Moss, a member of the five-candidate council ticket supported by Oberndorf. He said of Moss, "How can anyone who is a full-time federal employee have the time (to be a council member)?" He said that the government gave its consent because it did not know what the job entailed. "You can't serve two separate taxpayers at the same time."

Crech said that she, like Jennings, sought legal advice on possible conflicts. Neither she nor Jennings are running for reelection in May. She said once the perception of conflicts is created, the damage is done. She said she could support the ordinance to assist Council members in making decisions with confidence. However, she said, she is opposed to using the ordinance as a weapon, or as a cause (Council members) to abstain from votes on what they should participate. "She said she would support the ordinance although she was not sure she was doing the right thing because she would not be affected by the ordinance."

Fentress said that the council committee excluded "notable" interest from the original ordinance, leaving only significant interest because "notable" referred merely to a perception and should not go into an ordinance.

He said the "ordinance is as good an ordinance as we can come up with."

McClanan said that she was sorry she did not have Oberndorf's and Henley's suggestions sooner. She said she is the one that has problems with the ordinance. She said the charges are serious. "Once a charge is made he or she becomes guilty." She said the Conflict of Interests Committee is not an normal advisory committee but has judicial authority.

Henley said that anyone who files a false complaint is subject to a perjury charge, "so I don't know how many complaints this committee will receive."

Crech said she felt that Council would be amending the ordinance forever.

Mayor Harold Heischberger said the Mayor's committee served a needed function. He said that Council has been saying the ordinance would not be perfect. If the city had this ordinance, he said, "what happened to two of our peers would not have happened. We would have had advice of an ordinance instead of being kicked around by an irresponsible press." His references were to Jennings and Crech who were cited in newspaper stories as voting on issues in which they had conflicts, Crech through her ownership of an insurance company and Jennings through insurance activities.

Personal Pride

It's "a monster"

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The Atlantic Avenue cruisers apparently never got the message—that Atlantic Avenue is supposed to be a people place.

Although six blocks of Atlantic Avenue had been reduced from five lanes to three to discourage mechanized traffic, the wheels came in the same number as always, maybe more, on the first warm weekend of the year. What happened, said Councilman Robert Fenness was "a monster."

At his suggestion Monday afternoon City Council decided to halt the construction, part of the revitalization plan for Atlantic Avenue, until next Monday to decide whether the street changes will work.

So far, about $16,300 has been spent on the six blocks between

Golf course leasing?

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The city ought to think about leasing out its golf course, said Councilman J. Henry McCoy Jr. But while the city is operating the courses, he is opposed to increasing fees for senior citizens.

The proposed operating budget for 1986-87 includes increases in golf fees at the two city courses, Red Wing and Bow Creek. On the basis of 18 holes, the recommended increase for Red Wing is from $8 to $10 and for senior citizens, ladies day and juniors from $5 to $7. At Bow Creek the increase recommended are $7 to $9 and for senior citizens, ladies day and juniors, $5 to $7.

That's about a 40 percent increase for senior citizens, he said. Also, he said the winter rate ought to be a lot lower because mostly local citizens play on the 1985 North Carolina champion goose caller to attend new Back Bay station opening

Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge will host an open house and building dedication for its newly constructed Refuge Headquarters/Visitor Contact Station on Saturday, May 3, from 1 to 5 p.m.

Refuge Manager Ralph Keel said that refuge volunteers have been instrumental in planning and arranging the full schedule of activities that range from surf casting demonstrations to entertainment and guided walks.

The festivities will get underway with entertainment provided by Everkleer, a husband/wife team from Virginia Beach who perform traditional and original mountain folk music using guitar, banjo, hammered and Appalachian dulcimer, and Celtic war drum.

Following Everkleer's performance, the formal ceremony will begin at 2 p.m. and will feature Congressman G. William Wulfsberg and other distinguished local and wildlife speakers. The presentation of colors will be performed by the First Colonial High School Naval Junior ROTC Unit and the National Anthem will be played by solo trumpeter, Brian Fritsche, also from First Colonial High School.

The public will then be invited to tour the Visitor Contact Station to view exhibits and displays featuring decoys, waterfowl, refuge habitat and other wildlife topics. Films will be shown throughout the afternoon, along with a special slide/tape program on Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge prepared in memory of refuge volunteer Ruth Miner.

Walking tours will be offered along the Shorebird Trail throughout the afternoon. Visitors will also have many opportunities to observe migratory songbirds, osprey nesting activity, shorebirds, deer, and other forms of wildlife found on the refuge.

Wildlife exhibits by conservation-related organizations and by local artists will be featured inside a large exhibit tent. On hand for the event will be waterfowl carvers Curtis Waterfield, Romie Waterfield and Jarvis Snow; wildlife artist Paul E. Fisher; taxidermist Debbie Dougherty; and wildlife photographer Bob Swanson. Wild River Outfitters will be available with several canoes and kayaks to discuss canoeing safety and types of equipment. Surf casting will be demonstrated on the refuge beach by the Tidewater Anglers Club and the Virginia Beach "Sandwiches," the top men's and women's surf casting teams in the United States.

Organizations, agencies, museums, and institutes that will be participating include the Virginia Beach Maritime Museum, Back Bay Wildlife Guild, False Cape State Park, the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, the Raptor Society, the Cape Henry Audubon Society, the Virginia Bowhunting Education Association, and Dismal Swamp

The new Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge Headquarters/Visitors Contact Station.

National Wildlife Refuge. Other Highlights

Other highlights of the day will include Mrs. Erlene Snow from Powells Point, North Carolina, who is the 1985 North Carolina State Champion "Goose Caller. Snow also holds the Mid-Atlantic Voice Championship Title for 1985 and has been the second place world Champion Goose Caller for 1984 and 1985. She will be available in the exhibit tent throughout the day and will share her calling expertise with visitors upon request.

Later in the afternoon, the East Virginia Cloggers will perform precision and traditional dancing for visitor enjoyment. The team, which took first place in the Augusta, Georgia, Master City Championship in 1985, dances in line formation and features four and six couple dancing. The Cloggers have members from all the major Tidewater cities ranging in age from 18-84.

Following the performance of the East Virginia Cloggers, refuge employees will demonstrate the firing of a cannon net used in bird banding operations. Several duck traps will also be on display as well as an assortment of aluminum bands and other equipment used to capture and band birds.

Due to limited parking on the refuge, visitors are requested to park at the Little Island City Park adjacent to the refuge at the end of Sandpiper Road. Shuttle buses will be running throughout the day, beginning at 11:30 a.m. to transport individuals to and from the refuge.

For further information, contact the refuge office at 804-721-2412 or write Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge, P. O. Box 6286, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23456.

Historical parallel?

Once there was an American president who ordered the United States Navy to sail into the Gulf of Sidra. The president was concerned about the safety of Americans because the Arab ruler in Tripoli had declared war on the United States.

In the initial engagement of the conflict a U.S. Navy task force bombarded targets along the Mediterranean coast. One naval vessel from Tripoli was destroyed, with no resultant loss of American life. Tripoli, however, captured an American ship and held the captain and crew hostage.

The president had believed for some time that the only language terrorists understand is force. He felt that surrendering to blackmail was more costly in the long run than the seemingly high short-term cost of direct military intervention.

Attacks against Americans resulted from jealousy among Arab chiefs around the Mediterranean basin who were competing for primacy of leadership in the Arab world. The naval squadron was ordered to the Mediterranean with instructions to protect Americans and show full respect to friendly powers in the area.

In response to partisan criticism about the constitutional limits of war powers, the president declared that these special circumstances made specific congressional authorization unnecessary.

As the conflict in Tripoli dragged on, the president was criticized for pursuing an inclusive and indecisive policy. As a practical matter, his government applied more force against Tripoli than any other power and gained relatively favorable terms when the conflict ended.

The president initiated limited action because of severely practical considerations. These constraints were imposed by the limits of naval power, the limits of available financial resources and limits on the elasticity of public sentiment. The president considered each of these factors.

He determined that the maintenance of American naval forces in Mediterranean waters would be little more expensive than their maintenance in American waters. He also believed the mission would serve the purpose of training American officers and enlisted personnel — which it did.

The only objection within the Administration was raised by the Secretary of the Treasury who feared the cost of financing the exercise would strain the financial resources of the federal government — at the very time the president had made reduced federal spending, balancing the budget, the tax reduction the cornerstones of economic policy.

The president was Thomas Jefferson.

Norman Sisisky
U.S. Congressman

Terrorism

The United States has struck Libya in response to Qaddafi's support of international terrorism, and I support this action.

We can win the war against terrorism, but it will require courage. That is why the United States must pursue a policy of firmness that will make it clear that individual terrorists will be pursued and punished and that governments that support terrorism will face political, economic and, yes, military sanctions.

Individual terrorists could not succeed without the support of nations like Libya, Iran, Nicaragua and the Soviet Union. These nations arm, finance, train and protect these murderers and send them out into the world.

A successful war on terrorism will involve a series of blows and counter blows and some unavoidable casualties along the way. A forceful response against aggression may well provoke reprisals. But in the long run, it is the only way to make governments stop supporting terrorist killers. They must know that America will not sit back and take it.

I am deeply disturbed by the lack of support from France and other European countries. The refusal of France and Spain to permit our airplanes to fly over their territory added a tremendous risk and danger to the nighttime mission.

The conduct of our allies demonstrates their greed and cowardice. Nations like France and Italy are more concerned about the pursuit of the franc, lira or the dollar, than they are in helping to stop international terrorism.

But by pursuing a policy of firmness, hopefully, the United States can influence or shame these countries into doing what is right.

Paul Trible, U.S. Senator

Keep Christa's dream alive

Editor:

The nation will long remember Christa McAuliffe—a teacher, astronaut and an American hero. She was a dreamer whose passion was to reach for the stars. Her imagination knew no boundaries.

Today, our future dreamers can be found in our nation's classrooms. It was in the classroom that Christa taught and where she hoped her achievements would one day inspire her students to return-as teachers.

That is why the American Federation of Teachers established "Christa's Challenge," an education and scholarship fund that will pay for the education of our country's brightest students who wish to dedicate their lives to the challenge Christa loved most—Teaching!

Please help keep Christa's dream alive by sending your tax-free donations to: Christa's Challenge, P. O. Box 1930, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Your efforts will be a tribute to Christa McAuliffe, our nation's teachers and will go a long way towards meeting America's drastic need for more than a million newly qualified teachers in the coming decade.

Sincerely,
Albert Shanker,

Spring tackle care tips

Time to knock the dust off the rod

Over the many years I've been fishing, I often have found myself in a situation where I've asked, "Now how would a pro handle this?"

"Bassin' with the Pros" is a new column that will feature professional bass fishermen providing the answers to many of the questions I've asked, and I hope to many of your questions as well. The column also will offer tips on fishing equipment and its proper use and care to help all Virginia Beach anglers catch more bass.

Before you hit the water for the first day of the new season, you should make sure your equipment is as ready for bass action as you are. Spring is the time of year that most anglers inspect their tackle—that is, if they inspect it at all. 'Tis the season to check over your rods, reels, line, lures and tackleboxes. With the costs of these items going up each year, proper maintenance can keep these tools productive for many, many years.

Here's the basic "spring workout" that I take my gear through.

Tackleboxes — Completely empty the boxes and sort the contents according to types of tackle. Once the box is empty, remove any rust left by the lures and any film residue. I use an old toothbrush and a mild dishsoap for this job. Rinse the box thoroughly, blot it dry, and then let it air dry. I complete the cleaning process with an inspection of the box's hardware—handles, latches, etc.

Sharpen hooks — This is probably one of the most important areas overlooked by most anglers. A good, sharp hook will catch more fish. There are two types of hooks, the straight-point and curved-point. Each is sharpened differently. The straight-point hook is sharpened with a file at three different angles to make a triangular-shaped cutting edge. The curved-point hook is attacked with a rounded hone, which sharpens the two sides of the hook. If you can't eye the sharpness of the cutting edges, here's a test that my father taught me: drag the hook across your thumbnail. If the hook sticks into your nail while you are applying little or no pressure, then the hook is sharp.

Plugs — Polish your plugs with a damp cloth. Eliminate any rust on the hooks and put the original shape back into them with a needlenosed pliers. Check the lips, hook hangers, propellers and blades.

Spinnerbaits — Check all the metal parts for the slightest sign of rust. I touch up any lead heads that show chipping. I look at the skirts and replace those that have seen better days. I wash each lure with a damp rag and wipe dry.

Spinners — Check all the metal parts for that nasty rust and remove it wherever it occurs. Inspect the clevises and blades for effortless operation. Then, give the spinners a quick coating of demineralizing oil.

Jigs — Check the lead heads for chipping and repaint them if necessary. Also, look over the skirts for wear, tear and discoloration. Re-tie the skirts out of bucktail or FishHair.

Soft plastics — I keep all my soft plastic lures in a separate tacklebox, or transfer a few of my favorite plastic worms to baby food jars for leak-proof storage. The soft plastic lure contains plasticizer, an oily substance that gives the plastic its pliability. The plasticizer can leak with age or heat and can damage other lures stored nearby. If your soft plastic "springs a leak," be sure to scour the affected compartment and discard the pieces struck by the "oil spill."

Line — If you remember that the only thing between you and a trophy bass is your line, you might start taking a lot more interest in its condition. Cut off about five feet of line after every two or three hours of fishing. Remove any portion of line that shows nicks or abrasions.

Rods — Wash your rods with a dishsoap solution and wipe them dry. Inspect the blanks, handles, guides, tips, and wrapping for wear. If there is something wrong, don't hesitate to take the rod to a qualified repair shop for the necessary improvement.

Reels — All reels need to be periodically oiled and greased according to the manufacturer's instructions. As a rule of thumb, I take my reels to a repair shop every year for their "spring tuneup"—much like I take my car in for its checkup. I have the shop check parts for wear, repair or replace parts necessary, oil and grease the reels and put on new line. With the proper care and maintenance, reels should last you many, many years.

Teacher evaluation program

Moving in the right direction

By Gary Blumenfeld, president,
Virginia Beach Education Association

When the public started clamoring over the need for better quality teachers in the nation's schools, many politicians answered the call by mandating testing of new teachers and, in some cases, current teachers.

Most people that know about education, and that's nearly everybody, chuckled and commented that just because someone can pass a test will not guarantee that they will be a good teacher. Others, including a lot of teachers, are not convinced that those who fail a test might not make good teachers anyway.

The testing mania has now given way to calls for better college preparation. Most teachers who have gone through education programs feel that colleges and universities can take some steps to ensure the public and school boards that if they employ one of their graduates, he or she will know how to teach.

One university in Virginia advertises that if a school district finds one of their graduates less than satisfactory they will come in and fix the teacher for free. Since human minds are involved we can expect some debate on exactly what needs fixing. Can you imagine what we might go through on a teacher recall? It certainly could happen. Educational research has flipped-flopped on some important learning issues recently.

Virginia has a new Beginning Teacher Assistance Program and teachers who want to be fully certified and continue to teach for more than two years must be observed and demonstrate a number of teaching competencies before the state will bestow a teaching certificate. The program shows promise.

Yet, the only certain way to ensure that quality teaching is going on in each classroom is through an on-going system of teacher evaluation which can objectively identify the strengths and weaknesses of a teacher and provide the necessary information on how to improve. Teachers want to be evaluated and improved wherever possible. Teachers also want evaluation to be fair, objective and manageable.

Most school divisions do have an evaluation program for teachers. Whether the evaluation program works well or not is determined by the priority and time allocated by school boards and building administrators to the program. Virginia Beach is placing high priority on teacher evaluation and that is good news indeed.

This spring the school system is completing a pilot project testing a new evaluation instrument and procedure. The pilot project is assessing the outcome of over one year of hard work spent researching, debating, and analyzing what might be the best evaluation program to use in Virginia Beach.

One of the most novel components of the program calls for the training of principals and assistant principals in how to administer the program. In order to be certified as an evaluator, a principal must observe and rate a teacher's performance within specified limits. These efforts are being made to improve inter-rater reliability. Evaluator certification is not fool proof, but it does indicate the seriousness of the school division on teacher evaluation and the steps being taken toward objectivity.

Many teachers who have participated in the pilot of the new evaluation program feel that it is an improvement over the current evaluation procedure in the school system. There is a lot of work left to be done to make sure that evaluation of teachers works well and is fair. But it is safe and reassuring to say that the school board, administrators and teachers in Virginia Beach are moving in the right direction.

Book review by Great Neck librarian, Mary Mayer-Hennelly

Malcom Boyd's latest is moving, absorbing

Virginia Beach genre readers attracted to biographies will pause, consider and undoubtedly judge Malcom Boyd's Half Laughing, Half Crying, author, social commentator and activist, Boyd has compiled an autobiography that describes his life decade by decade. His ability to change and his continued determination to develop as an individual distinguish him as a unique presence in any arena.

Boyd was a successful Hollywood writer, producer and director in the 1940's but felt a void that he could fill. To the amazement of his peers, he was subsequently ordained an Episcopalian priest. He explained, "I was involved in mass media from a standpoint of taking and exploiting, and I became dissatisfied with it. My life had little meaning beyond each day."

While serving as a chaplain at Colorado State University, Boyd gained national attention when he relocated his ministry office campus into a coffee house. Feeling that Christianity was smug and snobbish, he actually heard confessions in a bar.

In the 1960's, he devoted himself to the civil rights movement. On occasion, he played in nightclubs and devoted his salary to civil rights organizations. Are You Running With Me, Jesus? was published in 1965. That emotional compilation of prayers was a surprise best seller and furthered his reputation.

Boyd's writings span the years. All of his plays were produced on television. Take Off the Mask was published in 1978 and reader response was tremendous. Of that work, Boyd said, "I've had more than a thousand letters. Some make you cry, others make you laugh." His declaration of homosexuality reverberated him to his position as a human rights advocate.

One can argue with Malcom Boyd's chosen path to self-understanding and commitment to God. Indeed, his values have caused considerable comment. Regardless, his involvement is an absorbing and personal drama and his story will demand your reaction.

Small trees are ideal for yard

The Urban Forest
By Paul Revel
State Forester

When a Virginia Beach homeowner considers improving the appearance of their yard, a decision is often made to plant a tree.

Given the variety of species from which to choose, making a decision as to what tree to plant is not easy. Proper tree selection for your yard is important as the tree is likely to impact your landscape for years to come.

Since the vast majority of us reside on homesites one-half acre or less, the temptation to over-plant your yard with trees should be avoided. Many species of trees can become quite large and overpower the rest of your landscape plantings. Maintenance on large trees can also be a problem as well as expensive.

In this limited space, one cannot discuss all the many possibilities. I would suggest, however, that homeowners consider planting smaller, flowering or otherwise colorful trees to enhance their landscapes. These trees should generally not exceed a 30-foot height at maturity and not attain an overly large trunk diameter. The following tree suggestions will add beauty to almost any landscape.

• Dogwood (cornus florida) is beautiful in all four seasons. The flowers are large and showy in spring; the leaves are soft green, then red-purple in fall. The glossy red fruits attract songbirds. It is important to plant this tree in partial shade. The pink and red varieties of this species are also quite beautiful.

• Redbud (cercis canadensis) is an extremely popular, small landscape tree that is not often seen in Tidewater. Clusters of rosy-pink flowers appear in April. Reddish-purple leaves change to dark green then to yellow. The divided trunk forms a spreading, graceful crown. This tree can be planted in full sun or light shade.

• Japanese red maple (acer palmatum atropurpureum) is a very showy species and versatile in the landscape. It can be used as a single specimen or in borders and groupings. It can be a single-stemmed small tree or a multi-stemmed shrub. Leaves are reddish-purple in spring and again in fall.

No parking in fire lanes

How many times have you seen someone drive up to the front of a Virginia Beach building and park their car and run inside? It's kind of hard not to notice the big yellow words that read "NO PARKING - FIRE LANE."

These fire lanes are reserved for emergency vehicles only. Not delivery trucks or people running in for just a couple minutes. Every business establishment should have these fire lanes clearly marked. In doing this, fire apparatus can gain a clear passage to the building. The closer to the base of a building the ladder truck can get, the higher the ladder will reach. Also, pumps have a 200-foot fire hose already hooked up and the closer they get, the less time is wasted connecting the hoses.

What people will not realize is that fire trucks move in rapidly and offenders will not be able to move from their illegal parking spot in time. If ticketed, you can expect to receive a $15 fine and if you do not pay that in 3 working days, the fine is doubled to $30.

So, to avoid receiving a ticket for parking in a fire lane, park in the parking lot like everyone else. When you start driving a fire truck, then you can park in a fire lane.

Virginia Beach Students win awards in State DECA Leadership Conference

Several Virginia Beach students won awards at the 43rd Annual Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) Leadership Conference, held in Norfolk recently.

From 258 high schools in Virginia, approximately 650 students attended. Several of the Virginia Beach student winners will attend the National DECA Leadership Conference to be held in Atlanta, Georgia, in May.

Dr. E. E. Brickell, division superintendent, opened the state awards session, and was presented an honorary life membership in Virginia DECA.

Virginia Beach student award winners were:

Carol Harmon of Bayside High School, first place individual award for Phillips Petroleum Company Free Enterprise Project; Tom Johnson of Cox High School, first place Food Marketing overall award by placing first in Selling and third in Basic and Social Skills; Susan Tuttle of Green Run High School, third place overall Food Marketing supervisory level by placing first in Management and first in Comprehensive Test, placed in Top 6 of Virginia Student of the Year Award, and second place individual award for Phillips Petroleum Company

Free Enterprise Project.

Also, Laura Britt of First Colonial High School, third place overall in Food Marketing master employee level by placing first in Comprehensive Test and second in Personal Selling; Veda Ray, May Field, and Susan Tuttle of Green Run High School, second place chapter award for Phillips Petroleum Company Free Enterprise Project; Rob Ballard of Cox High School, first place in Competency Test; Restaurant Marketing supervisory level.

Also, Diane Portis of Green Run High School, first place in Job Interview; Richard Badgley of First Colonial High School, first place in Personal Selling for Restaurant Marketing master employee level; Tonja Hamblin of Princess Anne High School, first place in Sales Demonstration; Elissa Addabbo of Princess Anne High School, third place in Human Relations Apparel and Accessories master employee level; David Henry of Kempsville High School, third place Comprehensive Test for Automotive and Petroleum; Stephanie Lewis of Kempsville High School, third place Career Manual; Kempsville High School DECA Chapter won District 27 Trustee Award.

• Saucer magnolia (magnolia soulangeana) has large saucer-shaped flowers. These early spring blossoms are pinkish-purple outside and white inside. This tree likes full sun and does well in most Tidewater soils. The tree also has good pollution tolerance.

There are a number of small, showy trees in the genus of cherries, plums and cherry laurels (prunus spp.). Your nurseryman knows which varieties are suited to our area. One tree from this group, the Purpleleaf plum (prunus thundersburgii) has delicate pink flowers. Its purple leaves hold their color all season. It is an ideal choice for a small yard as its mature height is 15 feet.

• Flowering crabapple (Malus spp.) have fragrant, showy flowers and small, decorative fruits. Again, check with your nurseryman to see which particular variety grows best in our area.

Using small trees will allow the Portsmouth homeowner to add extra trees to the landscape without hiding the beauty of shrubs, gardens or the home itself. Using flowering or colored-leaf varieties enhances the landscape beauty. There are certainly other small trees to be considered.

For a more complete listing, write for The Tree Book, published by the national Arbor Day Foundation: 200 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, Nebraska, 68410. Another good publication is Ornitho's All About Trees sold in many garden centers.

Free genetics lecture

• A free lunch-time lecture, "Genetics and the Future of Man," will be presented Thursday, May 1 at 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Campus of Tidewater Community College.

Dr. Paul J. Homsher, professor of Biology at Old Dominion University, will be the guest speaker.

The lecture, which is free and open to the public, will meet in the Bayside Building, Room B-100. For information, call 427-7226.

Man wanted by police for Domino's robbery

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers is seeking assistance in identifying the person responsible for the armed robbery of Domino's Pizza located at 368 Newtown Road.

At approximately 12:45 a.m. on Sunday morning, Jan. 5, a lone black male wearing dark sunglasses, a dark blue hooded sweatshirt, and gloves entered the store and after some conversation with employees produced a small caliber black handgun. The robber then demanded an employee to place all the money in a blue, flowered design, cut-off pillow case.

The suspect is described as 6 feet 4 inches tall, 190 to 200 pounds, with a medium build, receding hairline, light brown eyes, and a thin mustache. He was last seen running into the trailer park across the street from the Domino's store.

If Virginia Beach Sun readers know the identity of this man or have information on any other robbery, burglary, drugs, or the whereabouts of wanted persons, they should contact crime solvers at 427-0000. A reward of up to $1,000 will be paid if the information leads to an arrest. As always, informants do not have to reveal your name or testify in court to collect the reward.

Suspect

Commander-in-chief featured at Beach briefs

Admiral Carlisle A. H. Frost, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Atlantic Fleet, will be the guest speaker at the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce-Virginia Beach's annual Atlantic Fleet Sailor of the Year Banquet on Thursday, May 1 at the Pavilion Convention Center.

The social hour will begin at 6:45 p.m. Dinner will be served at 7:45 p.m. with the Sailor of the Year ceremonies afterward. Banquet tickets are $22 per person. For reservations or more information, call 490-1221.

The Chief of Naval Operations established the "Sailor of the Year" program in 1972 to recognize the outstanding sailor of the Atlantic and Pacific Fleets. The program was expanded in 1973 to include the outstanding sailor from the Navy's shore operations. The Sailor of the Year program is co-sponsored by the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce-Virginia Beach, the Non-Commissioned Officers' Association, and the City of Virginia Beach.

Each year both the Atlantic and Pacific Fleets choose one individual as their Sailor of the Year, as well as a nominee from their shore commands to compete in the Shore Sailor of the Year competition. The chosen Shore Sailor of the Year, along with the Atlantic Fleet, Pacific Fleet, and Reserve Force Sailors of the Year, travel to Washington for a week.

There, they are advanced to the next higher pay grade by the Secretary of the Navy, presented the Navy Commendation Medal by the Chief of Naval Operations, and meet with various elected officials from their homes states and other dignitaries.

The Atlantic Fleet has the only program in which candidates in the Atlantic Fleet Sailor of the Year and shore representatives for the CNO Sailor of the Year competition and their spouses are brought to the Fleet.

Broad Bay group really cleans up

The Broad Bay Garden Club recently held its annual cleanup and aluminum recycling day, during which Broad Bay Island residents collected litter from roadsides and waterway areas. "Rid It" Frog, the mascot litter critter for the city's Clean Community Commission and the Virginia Beach Council of Garden Clubs, awarded prizes to youngsters for filling the most litter bags. First place winners were Lisa and Julie Rowe. Second place, Lane and Matt Baldwin.

1986 literacy workshop to be held at Beach TCC

The 1986 Disciplinary Literacy Workshop will be held at the Virginia Beach Campus of Tidewater Community College on Thursday, May 8, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in the Pungo Building Theatre.

The workshop will focus on literacy across the disciplines. It will demonstrate ways in which reading and writing skills benefit all students both during their academic/vocational studies and throughout their careers.

The keynote speaker will be Dr. Lillian Brannon, assistant professor of English and English Education at New York University. Dr. Brannon is the director of the Writing Center and associate director of the Expository Writing Program.

Bertha T. Morris, associate professor of English and Phil Thompke, associate professor of History are coordinating this event.

The workshop is sponsored by the Literacy Committee of Tidewater Community College, and is free and open to the public. Lunch is $4.25. For more information call Bertha Morris at 427-7243 or 427-7183.

Tornado shelters save lives

No one can prevent or stop a tornado, but there are precautions Virginia Beach homeowners can take to safeguard lives and property. Your family's survival in a tornado may depend on taking some basic steps in preparedness now before the storm warnings are issued.

Tornado shelters save lives. To protect your family, a shelter area should be selected in advance, and each family member should be aware of where it is and how to get to it quickly. Hold a tornado drill periodically, so all members of the family know what to do should a tornado strike. The drills also may show you the need for storing some items in or near your shelter area, such as a battery-powered light and radio and extra batteries.

Other items for your shelter might include a first aid kit, any special medication, a supply of bottled water, and food that does not require cooking.

A survival kit for the home should be designed for use during and after any severe weather, such as a tornado or winter storm. You could find yourself isolated and your home without power. Proper preparations could allow you to survive for a few days without outside assistance.

This information is provided by the Virginia Department of Emergency Services.

5th Street and 11th Street. The project under contract was to continue to 25th Street but Fentress said that it was better to stop now and bear the loss than to go all the way and find out the plan won't work.

The plan was supposed to use the outside lanes for people's places and to have no one north-bound and one southbound lane with a turn lane in between. But what happened on that one sunny weekend was that the six blocks turned into a parking lot, Fentress said.

The concept was recommended by the city's consultants Mickiewicz, Robertson & Associates Ltd. In January of last year in a report on the Atlantic Avenue Beautification (it's called Revitalization now) Project. The report said that if Atlantic Avenue is to regain its status as a people place, its auto traffic must be drastically curtailed and the roadway width greatly reduced. But while the plan called for three lanes, they were to be one-way, northbound south of 31st Street. The plan would increase the sidewalk widths to 31 feet west of the west side and 12 feet on the east side for the area south of 25th Street.

And Fentress acknowledged that he understood that if three lanes were going to work, it would have to work one way.

Merchants, however, have objected to one-way traffic on the chance that it might hurt business. Why take the chance that it might hurt business? Fentress asked. Nobody knows.

Most people, he said, feel that the primary concerns are the elimination of telephone poles, enforcing the zoning ordinance, signage and improving the boardwalk. That's what the visitors are interested in, he said. They are not the ones who ride up and down Atlantic Avenue.

According to consultants from the Urban Land Institute, who made a study at the request of the Research Area Advisory Committee, Fentress said, the cruising is typical of any street that runs along the ocean.

Fentress also said that safety, the ability of the police and fire personnel to get in and out, is a major concern.

Council has allocated $79,500 for the project.

TBA pre-apprenticeship program yielding dividends for people, facilities

By Lin J. Cooper

TBA PA Publisher

After seven years in the Navy, 27-year-old Iva Steele decided to pursue her dream of owning her own company. The route she has chosen includes eight weeks in Tidewater Builders Association's pre-apprenticeship training program, followed by a four-year stint as a plumbing apprentice. That trade, she said, seems to be the one out of which she can most likely develop her own business.

Stephen Kang has been a builder, a travel agent, an inventor and a restaurateur. Now, at 60, the Malaysian native is a pre-apprentice who hopes "to gain some knowledge of the American way of building" so he can once again be a builder on his own.

Kang was a public works contractor during the last few years of World War II, but lack of capital prevented him from remaining in that field. He eventually established a travel agency in the Far East, where he ran successfully for 17 years.

Nine years ago, Kang and his wife, who is an American, moved to Hartford, Conn. and from there to Virginia Beach. He applied for a variety of building trades, jobs and training programs but met rejection after rejection until he discovered TBA's pre-apprenticeship program.

Twenty-three-year-old John Spillane is a young man who knows what he wants out of life. Leaving a dead-end job in an Indianapolis hardware store, Spillane moved recently to Virginia Beach, where his parents live, and got involved in TBA's pre-apprenticeship training program. His goal is to eventually establish his own business and he has, in fact, already started saving money to do that.

Although Spillane initially planned to become an electrician, exposure to a variety of trades through the program has decided him on a plumbing apprenticeship instead.

Steele, Kang and Spillane are three of 16 pre-apprentices currently working on an addition to the Pendleton Child Service Center in Virginia Beach, a facility that treats young children with behavioral problems. As TBA's 1986 community service project, the child service center addition represents an opportunity for the pre-apprentices to acquire hands-on experience in construction trades.

Once the addition's wood shell was in place, the pre-apprentices began work, and they are now in the process of erecting interior walls, wiring the building for electricity, and installing the plumbing in Virginia Beach, a facility that treats young children with behavioral problems. As TBA's 1986 community service project, the child service center addition represents an opportunity for the pre-apprentices to acquire hands-on experience in construction trades.

Once the addition's wood shell was in place, the pre-apprentices began work, and they are now in the process of erecting interior walls, wiring the building for electricity, and installing the plumbing and heating and air conditioning systems. By May 2, the class will have completely finished the addition so it is ready for occupancy.

According to Cheryl Foster-Johnson, the center's director, the new addition will house two staff offices and a large recreation room for the children. The space created in the original building by moving two offices will allow room for four more beds, she said.

The Pendleton Child Service Center, which opened in 1973, is a joint project of the state and the cities of Chesapeake and Virginia Beach. More than 3,000 children have been referred to the center's treatment program, which offers both residential and out-patient services.

Once the addition is completed, said Johnson, the center will be able to accommodate 20 children at a time in its residential program and six to eight children for out-patient treatment.

Plans for the addition have been in the works for two years, but the high cost of purchasing a modular unit, as was originally proposed, proved a major setback, she said. The center finally decided to have an exterior shell built and turned to TBA for help in completing the project.

"I was familiar with TBA's pre-apprenticeship training program because I was president of the YWCA board (of directors) at the time TBA converted a garage into a children's playhouse at the YWCA Women-in-Crisis Shelter," Johnson explained.

The final cost for the completed addition, she said, will be around $37,000 less than half the amount bid on a modular addition. Funding for the project was approved by the General Assembly.

Next week, TBA's craft instructor, Emerson Conrad Jr., will take a group of center children through the addition and allow them to watch the pre-apprentices in action. Then, at 2 p.m. April 22, Sandy Bixler, TBA's manpower training coordinator, will show the children a film about the construction industry.

"We are pleased to have selected the Pendleton Child Service Center as our 1986 community service project," said L. Bert Reavis, chairman of TBA's public relations committee. "It is especially satisfying to embark on a project that is not only a value to the community but to the men and women in our pre-apprenticeship program as well."

The pre-apprenticeship program, which is in its ninth year, has provided training for 690 disadvantaged young men and women. Funded through the U.S. Department of Labor, the program is administered by the Southeastern Virginia Job Training-Administration as directed by the Private Industry and Policy Councils.

Legislation passed during the Reagan administration, the Job Training Partnership Act, enables the Department of Labor to fund training programs throughout the United States. The legislation seeks to increase employment opportunities and reduce welfare dependency by providing the necessary training and services to help individuals enter the labor market.

After successfully completing TBA's pre-apprenticeship program, students are placed in jobs with private employers and begin formal apprentice training.

Literature series continues

Dr. Ernestine Robinson with the English Department, Hampton University, will continue a lecture-discussion series entitled "The Burden of the Past in Southern Literature" on Thursday, May 1, at 7:30 p.m. in the Oceanfront Area Library.

Dr. Robinson will be discussing Light in August by William Faulkner.

The series is free though space is limited. Call the library at 428-4113 to reserve a seat or learn more about this series.

Civic organization council meets

The Council of Civic Organizations of Virginia Beach, Inc., will hold its next general meeting on Wednesday, April 9 at 7:30 p.m. in city council chambers at the Virginia Beach Municipal Center.

Area, state free of dangerous disease

Commissioner of Agriculture and Consumer Services, S. Mason Carbaugh, announced today that Virginia has attained a swine brucellosis-free status. With the addition of Virginia, a total of 28 states and two territories are now declared as Validated Brucellosis-Free areas by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The Commissioner stated that all swine herds in which the disease was found have been slaughtered or have now been released from quarantine. We no longer have any known swine brucellosis in Virginia, he said, and there are no pending tests of herds suspected of having the disease.

Commissioner Carbaugh further explained that the procedures for maintaining continuous surveillance of Virginia's swine population are now considered adequate to locate swine brucellosis if it is reintroduced into Virginia.

Businesswoman takes garden center from small to large in six years

Shortly after her daughter Kelly was born, Virginia "Ginny" H. Patterson, former Patient Accounts Manager for the Chesapeake General Hospital, wife of general surgeon Dr. Henry Patterson, and a born mountain gal from Big Stone Gap, found herself with more time on her hands than she wanted. She needed to do more than mother the easy-to-raise Kelly.

She wanted to get back to work. Those were the good old days, Ginny recalls today. Before she saw the For Sale sign on the garden center at the corners of Kempsville Road and Centerville Turnpike.

After convincing an understanding husband that the near-defunct garden center would be a good place for their savings, Ginny signed the papers that made her—immediately—into a dirt-under-the-fingernails apprentice horticulturist and businesswoman. She named her and husband's investment, optimistically, Evergreen Garden Center.

That was in 1980. She began with two shack-like buildings, each ten feet wide, 20 feet long. Set behind the buildings were two-and-a-half acres of assorted shrubs, trees, and plants. It rained a lot in the early days, she recalls.

On the good days she could be found huddled next to a kerosene heater, poring over her books. On the bad days she would be in the mud, making the best selection of a Legustrum, which she generally guaranteed.

She learned quickly. Her staff grew from one part-time helper, to four, then six, finally, this year, to 10 staff members, most of them trained in horticulture. The Evergreen Garden Center progressed and prospered, even as the intersection of Kempsville and Centerville lapsed into a seemingly perpetual state of

Just about everything makes good compost

"Whenever I leave anything on my plate," I heard a little girl tell Art Linkletter some years ago, "my mother always tells me about the starving children in Indiana." Fortunately, my children are too old to talk to Art Linkletter, but I did overhear one of them caution a friend he brought home from college, soito voce, "For God's sake don't throw anything organic in the garbage while you're here. We save it all for starving earthworms!"

I will plead guilty to having an unusual fondness for earthworms, not because I have unusual taste in pets, but because their presence in my garden indicates that I have made them comfortable with cushions of compost — and organic matter, compost, is perhaps the most valuable thing that anyone can give a garden. It holds moisture in sandy soil; it keeps clay soils from bonding together into yellow brick roads; it provides food for microorganisms which free nutrients for plants; it keeps the texture loose and easy to work.

The result of my obsession with "organic garbage" is that my garden soil looks and feels a little like crumbly chocolate cake, and I will admit to receiving a certain tactile pleasure in crumbling the spongy and moist soil between my fingers and slipping carrots and beets from the ground with hardly a tug.

Today, magazines and books promote the use of compost and give complicated advice on shredding debris, layering correctly, turning frequently—to hear them tell it, creating compost almost requires a degree in chemistry. And people still ask me if saving all that garbage—foot—and digging is easy in my compost fed garden, spread a thin layer of organic materials and sprinkle the whole thing with a gallon of water that contains a dissolved compost tablet. Then I cover it up. I still have a compost pile, to be sure. That's where my autumn leaves and my pruning leftovers go.

I let my grass clippings stay open the lawn, to give their nitrogen back to the soil, but a lot of my neighbors think that's messy, so I collect the bags of potato peelings, apple cores, left over macaroni and cheese—doesn't result in a smelly garbage heap that attracts flies and rodents. Well, no, it doesn't.

A well-tended compost pile doesn't smell either, but it takes longer than my method. I bury my organic garbage right in the garden—anywhere in the spring and fall when nothing's planted and between the rows in the summer. I just dig down about a grass clippings they put out for the lawn, and add those to the pile. I'm not above giving the whole heap a little taste of microbes (I buy mine in a 2-pound box for about $7 from Henry Field's and one box lasts all summer). Nick Reavis of that company tells me the compost is ready in 10 to 30 days. I never timed it, but I do know that those little microbes reduce the size of my pile of debris in a hurry, and I don't have to pay them overtime. I add a little manure, too, when I can get it, but this feast usually goes to the flowers and shrubs—anything that grows loves compost.

Every green plant composted back into my garden conditions it—improves its ability to support new life. Soil tests to learn the special needs of each back yard plot are still recommended, but the addition of compost keeps those cushions of humus between the soil particles where the microorganisms can feast and perform their magic.

My kitchen garden soil feels smooth and crumbly, diggable with bare hands—and although I don't raise enough vegetables to feed the starving children in India (or Indiana, for that matter), I do a pretty good job with the members of the football team who still show up occasionally, and are warned, "Don't throw anything in the trash can around here. We save it all to feed the garden."

Mr. Morgan, co-owner and chief horticulturist of Coleman Nursery, is this week's Almanac columnist. If you have a problem that won't wait, you may call Mr. Morgan at 484-3426.

If you were to make a selection of shade trees for your own yard, what would they be? Consider 10,000 square feet of lawn, on rather typical sandy loam soil. Also, consider a modestly contemporary house, surrounded by pine. How about Red Maple; Pin Oak? Please, I trust your judgement and not necessarily the judgement of someone who just got a load of shade trees and merely wants to sell them quickly. Gloria Berger, Churchland.

When you're considering shade trees, keep in mind that they each have their own distinct set of advantages and disadvantages, but the following out perform others in all of Hampton Roads—and they're available in all good nurseries and garden centers:

Least, shade-master variety—Small leaflets, medium growing speed, yellow fall foliage.

Maple, Silver—Fastest growing of all shade trees; roots always on the surface (be careful of septic fields and drainage systems); requires some pruning at the early growth stages.

beautiful fall foliage of orange and red colors.

Oak, Willow—Fast growing among oaks; small leaves; dull, yellow fall foliage; not as winter-hardy when young.

Finally, by 1985, the land she leased for her garden center had become incredibly valuable—roughly $500,000. And the traffic problems were getting worse. A review of her sales records showed steady growth for the previous three years, despite gridlocked traffic patterns. It was, she concluded, time to move—and grow.

"I guess I've always had a good loyal customer base," she said recently. "And a good loyal staff."

With the knowledge, and six years of maximum Garden Center Ranger training, Ginny sought out and purchased almost three acres of land further down Centerville Turnpike, near the Mount Pleasant intersection in Chesapeake. Construction of the 2400 square foot center is nearing completion today, and should be ready for business in 30 days or less, she says.

Behind the sleek-looking cedar building are the familiar semi-circular nursery frames and gravelled walkways for the shrubs and trees. The roads are uncrowded, lined with green foliage and bucolic homes. The access is easy, and safe.

"I'm not going to miss those old shacks," Ginny says today. "And I'm sure not going to miss the daily traffic jam outside my door every morning."

Right amount of light is key to good plants

Whether your windows face north, south, east or west, you can fill them with colorful flowering and foliage plants that will grow and thrive. The key to growing attractive houseplants is to select plants that will thrive in the amount of light you have available.

Most plants won't die the minute they are placed in a window that is too dark, but without the light they need to produce food they will literally starve to death. Such plants will slowly lose old leaves and produce smaller new ones, and as time goes on will become tall and spindly.

If you need the plants to grow to the amount of light you have available at your window, and observe a few basic cultural practices, you will be well on your way to a windowill garden that will grow and thrive not only from month to month, but from year to year.

The first step in deciding how much light your windowill garden receives is to determine which way the window faces. Use a compass if necessary. North-facing windows receive the least amount of light, south the most. East and west windows receive roughly the same amount, although west windows tend to be hotter than east windows.

You must also consider how much actual light finds its way through your windows. The glass itself cuts down on light, even when the windows are sparkling clean. If your window is heavily shaded by trees, curtains, nearby buildings or a porch roof or awning, the amount of light will be reduced considerably. Curtains, even sheer ones, can effectively turn a west window into a "north" one.

If you have an unusually dark window, or a dark corner that cries for a plant, consider purchasing two identical plants recommended for a north window. Rotate the plants between the dark spot and a bright window on a weekly basis.

Supplemental lighting is another solution. Suspend a fluorescent fixture over the spot where you want the plant, and use one cool-white and one warm-white tube to provide a wide spectrum of light. Attach a timer so it will turn on and off automatically.

Most plants first become ill at least twelve to fourteen hours of supplemental light per day.

Another way to provide additional light is to reflect it onto plants. White walls will reflect more light than dark ones, and a well-placed mirror can reflect a great deal of light onto plants in a room.

The amount of light available to a plant diminishes quite rapidly as you move away from a window. Place plants as close as possible to a window without touching it. If they need to be more than two feet from an east or west window, choose a species recommended for a northern exposure.

Dust on leaves cuts down on the amount of light a plant receives. The misting used to raise humidity levels around a plant doesn't wash off much dust. A better solution is to regularly give your plants a brief shower. For large plants, tie a plastic bag around the pot, covering the soil as much as possible (so it doesn't wash away), and set the plant, pot and all, in the shower under a gentle stream of tepid water for several minutes. Small plants can be rinsed in the sink. In the summer, plants can be moved outside and sprayed with a gentle stream from the hose.

Regular showers also help with insect control by washing away insects before an infestation gets started. Most can be washed away with a gentle rub. Use a soft brush for hairy-leaved plants. If you see evidence of an infestation, wash the leaves with a weak solution of white soap (one or two tablespoons to a gallon of water) with a soft sponge. Be sure to allow enough time for plants to dry off completely before nightfall, however, to avoid disease problems.

Select your plants according to the amount of light you have available, don't neglect the basics of good culture—proper watering, humidity levels, fertilizing and soil conditions—and you will be well on your way to houseplants you can enjoy for years to come.

Godspeed drops anchor for Cape Henry Day program

As part of this year's Cape Henry Day program, sponsored annually by The Order of Cape Henry 1607, the replica of the English sailing vessel Godspeed will anchor in waters off Cape Henry.

The annual Cape Henry program commemorates the landing in 1607 of the first permanent settlers in America.

A special service is scheduled for Saturday, April 26 at 2:30 p.m., on the beach near the Memorial Cross at Fort Story.

In a re-enactment of the first landing, members of the Godspeed's crew, dressed in 17th-century costumes, will row a shallop to the beach. There they will raise a crude wooden cross and claim the land for King James I, the British monarch who authorized the voyage. Then, along with costumed representatives of the Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation and armor-clad soldiers, they will re-create portions of the original religious ceremony performed in 1607.

The 17th-century colonists will then join 20th-century participants for the traditional first-landing Anglican Service sponsored by The Order of Cape Henry 1607. The order has since 1926 conducted this annual service.

The service will include prayer and music by the Continental Army Band. Also featured will be remarks by Virginia Beach Delegate Owen B. Pickett, who will present the Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation, Virginia Beach Mayor Harold Heischberger, and other dignitaries.

The event will be open to the public without charge.

In case of rain, the commemorative service will be held Sunday, April 27.

courses then. Holders of Virginia Beach Recreation Center card membership cards get $2 off the fee, McCoy added, but many of the golfers don't bother to get the cards.

The golf courses are operated as an enterprise activity of the Parks and Recreation Department; that is, the fees are supposed to pay for the cost. The fees are raised to meet the increasing cost, and McCoy observed that the courses have purchased a number of new golf carts.

The city might do better to lease out the courts, McCoy said, but care has to be taken in preparing the lease agreement. A private entrepreneur who holds a three-to-five-year lease may overplay the course with a poorly maintained course going back to the city at the end of the lease period. Another downside of leasing, he said, is that the operator may not give senior citizens a break at all.

The city soon will be operating its third 18-hole golf course, at Kempsville.

Other courses in the city are private or semi-private. Princess Anne and Cavalier are completely private, while Hells Point and Broad Bay are privately owned but open to the public. But at Broad Bay, for instance, the cost for 18 holes is $23 to play and rent golf carts and McCoy said many people don't have that kind of money.

Two more courses are being constructed by R. G. Moore, Cypress Point, who is part of Sajo Farms, and another on Salem Road.

Still, counting all the courses, the city still has only a half or a third of what are needed here, said McCoy, adding, "I don't think the city wants to get in the golf course business" when there

Beach Planning Department says 900 acres for city

The Planning Department has identified as most suitable for industrial zoning 900 acres of the area impacted by the AICUZ (Air Installation Compatible Use Zone) study.

The area is basically in the vicinity of Landstone Road, Ships Corner Road and the London Bridge area.

The Navy has purchased development rights over 4,000 acres surrounding the Naval Air Station at Oceana. The land falls in the danger and noise zones delineated by AICUZ. That is, the Navy has paid the owners of the property to limit the way the land is used. The purpose is to avoid concentrations of people on the property which leaves agricultural, some industrial and a few commercial uses as the most compatible.

Planning Director Robert Scott said that the city can use approximately 900 acres of the property for industrial uses in the foreseeable future. The city has received a number of requests for zoning changes in the area which have been deferred pending the adoption of some plan that will direct Council on making zoning decisions in the area.

Even without AICUZ, city planner Jack Whitty said, much of the land would be unsuitable for industry because it is in the flood plain or has poor access to major highways.

Scott Monday afternoon recommended a plan that can be used as a guide for Council in rezoning applications. The plan has been reviewed and is supported by the Planning Commission and is expected to be considered by City Council within a few weeks.

The Planning Department used a set of criteria, including such things as access and environmental considerations, in preparing the plan.

Whitty said that all types of zoning classifications are on the land now, but restrictions in the agreements the Navy has with each property owners and the use of the land and to different degrees.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of this suit is to have the Court decree that the remains buried in the Fannie Perkins Cemetery, located approximately 1,000 feet east of the intersection of Lynnhaven Parkway and Viking Drive in the City of Virginia Beach, which property is more particularly described in the Bill of Complaint on file in the office of the Clerk of this Court, be removed and interred in some more suitable repository by a reputable funeral director, in accordance with the strict standards of his profession, and in a manner having due respect for the dead and the sensibilities of their living heirs and next of kin. And it appearing by Affidavit filed according to law that certain of the defendants are not residents of this State and that their names and last known post office addresses are as follows: Clara Cornick, 1317 Colwyn Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19140; H. L. Franklin, Box 267, Amherst, West Virginia 25607; Catherine S. Goffgan, Box 1256, 6 Cobblestone Drive, Dorchester, Massachusetts 01912; Clyde V. LEGAL NOTICES

VIRGINIA: In the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach on the 25th day of March, 1986

v.
Henry Doummar, a/k/a Henry T. Doummar; Vivian C. Doummar, Richard Doummar, Ronald Doummar and Parties unknown, being more particularly described as the spouses, widows, widowers, heirs, devisees, personal representatives and successors in title, if any, of Henry Doummar, a/k/a Henry T. Doummar, Vivian C. Doummar, Richard Doummar and Ronald Doummar, the issue, if any, of Maurice Doummar, a/k/a Maurice Doummar, and such other persons who may have an interest in the property which is the subject matter of this cause, all of whom are made parties defendant by the general description of Parties Unknown, Defendants.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of the above-styled cause is to effect partition among the owners, by sale, allotment or otherwise, of the real property described as follows:

ALL THAT CERTAIN lot of land, with the improvements thereon, situated in the City of Virginia Beach (formerly Princess Anne County), State of Virginia, known, designated and numbered as Lot Number One (1) in Block Three (3); said lot having an aggregate frontage of 34.03 feet on the North side of 29th Street running back between parallel lines 140 feet, as shown on that certain plat entitled "Map of Central Park, Inc., Va. Beach, Va.", dated May 31, 1926, made by J. M. Baldwin, C. E., which plat is duly recorded in the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach (formerly Princess Anne County), Virginia, in Map Book 8, at page 10; together with all right, title and interest, if any, in and to the unnamed land twenty feet (20') in width adjacent to the northern line of the above-described property as shown on the aforesaid plat.

And it appearing from the Bill of Complaint and by the Affidavit filed (1) that Henry Doummar, a/k/a Henry T. Doummar, is not a resident of the Commonwealth of Virginia; (2) that the last known address of Ronald Doummar is in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia; (3) that some of the potential defendants and their addresses are unknown, as shown in the caption of this Order of Publication; and (4) that some of the defendants may have died leaving heirs, devisees or personal representatives, all of whom are unknown and that there are or might be persons other than those named in the Bill of Complaint interested in the real estate to be disposed of in this suit whose names are unknown, namely the successors to Fred Wilson, et al., as Trustees of the Sir Morgan Real Light Lodge No. 365 of Princess Anne County, or other persons who may have succeeded to the interests of said Lodge, and making said persons parties defendant by the general description of "Parties Unknown" in the Bill of Complaint.

It is, therefore, ORDERED that the above-named persons, if living, and if dead, their heirs, devisees and personal representatives and if married, their respective consorts, and all persons other than these herein named, who are or might be interested in the real estate to be disposed of in this suit, whose names are unknown, and who are made defendants by the general description of "Parties Unknown," do appear on or before May 16, 1986, and do what is necessary to protect their interest. It is further ordered that the foregoing portion of this Order be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks in the Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper of general circulation in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia.

About a third of city's voters expected to vote

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter
By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

One of the most difficult Councilmanic campaigns in the city's history will end at the polls next Tuesday when only 35,000 to 40,000 of the city's 120,000 registered voters are expected to cast their ballots.

For some the difficulty is money. Each campaign gets costlier, partly because of the higher prices for getting a message across.

For others it's a real or perceived negativism on the part of their opponents and even outsiders which has crept into the campaign.

Also, the general unrest of the populace which surfaced dramatically when two city bond referendums were defeated last March apparently has continued to haunt some of the contenders.

And, above all, the pace has been merciless. This is the year of the forums. More forums have been held this year than ever before, most by special interest groups. Some days candidates find themselves attending two meetings, conferences or coffees.

The candidates generally, however, welcome the forums as a means to present their platforms. Even when the attendance is poor, press coverage helps publicize their views. One candidate said he would like to have more than the two or three minutes allotted candidates to talk at the various forums.

Sixteen for Six Seats

Sixteen candidates are contending for the six Council seats where terms expire June 30—not an overwhelming number compared to 25 who tried out for five seats four years ago.

All of the voters will get to cast a vote for all six seats although four of the seats are borough seats. The other two are at-large seats. Candidates have found that a number of Virginia Beach voters do not realize that they can cast votes for representatives from boroughs other than their own.

Under the Virginia Beach system, seven of the Council members must be residents of the seven boroughs, but they are voted into office by all the voters in the city. The four at-large Council members can be residents of any borough and also are voted into office by all the voters. The seats on the ballot this year are:

Pungo Borough. Barbara Henley who occupies the seat now is running for re-election and has no opposition.

Lynnhaven Borough. H. Jack Jennings Jr. who occupies the seat now is not running. Contenders are Albert Balko and Walter Vargo.

Kempsville Borough. Incumbent Dr. H. Henry McCoy Jr. is running for re-election against F. Tom Holland and John Moss.

At-large. Incumbent Nancy Creech is not running. Incumbent Robert G. Jones is running for re-election. Also competing for the two seats are Nancy Parker, Fred Board, Gerald M. Johnson, Capt. Danny J. Michaels, H. S. Sam Myers, L. M. "Lou" Pace

Infant Stimulation program helps kids with Spina Bifida

Communications Specialist
Virginia Beach Office of Public Information

For most 14-month-olds, his might not be considered extraordinary, but for George Bryan, it is an achievement his doctors couldn't have predicted at his birth.

The little blonde has a condition known as spina bifida, and the photo was taken during a special infant stimulation class.

The infant stimulation program began in Virginia Beach in 1976 as an all volunteer effort, then in 1978 became one of the city's Mental Retardation/Developmental Disabilities Programs, said Phyllis Jackson, Infant Stimulation Program coordinator.

The idea behind infant stimulation is for trained volunteers to work one-on-one with children up to two years old who, for medical or other reasons, have developmental disabilities. Each volunteer is assigned a child to help one day a week, stimulating speech and various physical skills, and offering support and encouragement for achievements like little George's.

Referrals to the program usually come from physicians, but parents may also call for an evaluation of their child. Whenever a referral comes in, Jackson sets up a home visit with the family to evaluate the child in his or her home environment.

Once an infant is admitted to the program, a staff member works with the parents in determining the child's special needs and goals. Then the volunteers step in to add their special touch.

"We rely very heavily on our volunteers," said Jackson. "Many are professionals such as pediatric nurses or special education teachers, and some are moms who have had children in the program before. They're all great, with the patience of saints."

Volunteers needed

At present, more volunteers are needed to keep pace with the program's growing enrollment. There are now around 40 volunteers for about 60 children. To be selected, each potential volunteer is interviewed to determine skills, abilities and concerns.

"I get a really rewarding feeling coming and helping out these moms," said Jan Lyall, a volunteer whose daughter came through the program before. "My daughter and I loved the classes, and she has done incredibly well."

The children are divided into eight classes, each of which meets weekly at Wycliffe Presbyterian Church on Great Neck Road. Each class offers a variety of group and individual activities, and any given moment may find a volunteer helping a child play dress up in front of a mirror, crawl through a miniature playhouse, finger paint, or leaf through an album filled with photos Jackson has taken during class. Other activities include swimming in area pools.

Moms usually attend class with their children, and thus gain information and support from other mothers faced with similar concerns.

Deborah Via, whose seven-month-old daughter Ashley has been in the program since November, said, "I'm finding there is something like this. I think it has helped Ashley, and I've appreciated being able to get together with other mothers with the same problems. It helps to know you're not the only one."

One week a month, the program sponsors a Mom's/Dad's Day Out, in which the children attend classes without their parents. This is an important way for the volunteers to get to know the child alone, said Jackson. "A child begins to develop independence when not always connected to mom."

"One of our main goals, in addition to helping the children achieve, is to support the parents and help them find resources," said Jackson. To find out more about the program, call her at 496-0927.

In future, Jackson, would like to see the program grow and expand to work more with siblings and the total family, working parents, single parents, and teenage parents. At present, Jackson is the only full-time paid staff member, with two others working part-time or on a consultant basis.

The program will reach its peak when 64 children are enrolled; because her program strives to set the upper limit of each class to eight children so that it stays small and personal.

Most of the infants stay in the program until they "graduate" at age two. This event is marked with a special ceremony, hats and diplomas. "This is a big step," said Jackson. "It shows the parents that their child has completed one aspect of development, and it minimizes fear of the unknown."

And for a little boy like George, the program offers a glimpse into a positive future.

Coming this June on City of Virginia Beach Cable Channel 29 is a special segment about the Infant Stimulation Program. Call 427-4111 for more information.

"Images from the Deep Sea" on view at Municipal Gallery in May "Images from the Deep Sea," a collection of ten works by Portsmouth photographers Claudia and Jim Wade will be on view at the Municipal Center Gallery from May 1 through June 2.

The Municipal Gallery, one of the Virginia Beach Arts Center's satellite spaces for art, is free and open to the public. The gallery is located on the second floor corridor of the Virginia Beach City Administration Building in the Courthouse Complex. Hours are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Claudia and Jim Wade's works on view are color photographs that feature the rich hues and fascinating life forms discovered on the ocean floors of the deep sea. These images are the visions of a select few—namely scuba divers and explorers. Most of the photographs on display were shot in Bonaire, N.A., off the coast of Venezuela in the Caribbean. The Wades do most of their photography—both colorfully and artfully documented—in such locales around the world.

Claudia and Jim Wade, both scuba diving instructors for local YMCA's, have found under water photography to be an exciting, shared venture, and one they enjoy teaching their students. In fact, the Wades and their students take scuba diving trips to Florida every two months, plus two yearly excursions to exotic places such as Jamaica, Hawaii, the Virgin Islands, and virtually every spot in the Caribbean, all to learn more about photographing ocean life forms as well as ocean ecology and diving.

28 Arts Center members win cash awards for their work

By Lynn Somers
Special to The Virginia Beach Star
Spring ArtsFest '86, held recently at the Virginia Beach Pavilion was a successful and energetic show. Twenty-eight Arts Center members won cash awards for their art work.

The Judge, Dr. Gerald Donato, Professor of Painting and Printmaking at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, considered the show to be an excellent representation of strong creative efforts. "I found this to be a difficult show to judge. Mixing categories such as craft and paintings can become comparisons between apples and oranges. But these were pleasant comparisons to make. The schools of thought span from a strong group of 'Beach Surrealists' to high-quality abstract work with a healthy dose of funky lower east side American expressionism in between," Donato said in his critical statement.

The top award—the Mayor's Trophy, presented by Virginia Beach Mayor Harold Heischberger at the Friday evening reception, went to Mary Basmight for her realistic oil painting titled "Go To Your Room."

Other awards presented at the ceremony were seven Awards of Excellence. These seven will be featured at a group show at the Virginia Beach Arts Center opening April 23. 10 Awards of Merit and 10 Honorable Mentions were also presented.

A detailed list of the winners follows. The Arts Center would also like to thank its gracious volunteers who offered their time and expertise in making the Spring ArtsFest a smashing success!

Mayor's Trophy, $300. Mary Basmight, Chesapeake.

West accepted into special dance course

Jocelyn Kristine West, age 14 and daughter of Cdr. and Mrs. William West, has been accepted into the "By Invitation Only" summer course of the School of American Ballet, New York City. West, a student at Lynnhaven Junior High, carries a 3.67 honor average and she spends 15 to 20 hours a week in dance classes and rehearsals at the Academy of Tidewater Ballet. Consumers rate quality

By Gayle Zydron

Comparison shopping, investigative alternatives, and recording expenses are votes for quality. These three will help ensure that the marketplace responds to consumers.

Inflation, deflation, rising energy prices, decreasing oil prices, rising unemployment, decreasing unemployment, and other indicators during the last decade have changed radically. Household incomes on the average have not increased as much in the past decade as in the previous decade.

Many households studied in a recent Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station Project put more emphasis on buying and using quality products. Other studies indicate quality as the number one factor in consumer purchasing decision. Thus, it is appropriate that "Consumers Rate Quality" is the slogan of the recently celebrated 1986 National Consumers Week.

Manufacturers and retailers recognize that the consumer expects and deserves quality services and products, says Glen Mitchell, Virginia Tech Extension consumer economist. Consumers vote with marketplace dollars about the acceptability of products and service.

One study done by the Virginia Cooperative Extension Service shows that half of the state's consumers feel that poor product quality is a major concern. Also, over half of the consumers commented on the poor quality of after-sale service and repairs.

Consumer expenditures led the United States out of the 1980-81 recession but, buyers continue to worry over poor quality. This concern may stem from lack of growth in buying power.

The concern for quality may explain the reason that many foreign-made products are now considered by consumers superior to objects made in the United States. This rating is particularly noticeable in cars which are now being driven longer.

Many surveys also indicate the consumer supports conservation for resources and clean air and water. This influences buying decisions. The time and other costs in repairing and returning less-than-ideal products are resented by the public. Quality saves money, resources, and time in many ways.

Many consumers will pay more for higher quality if they believe a product is better. Producers are upgrading products by adding new features, emphasizing quality control, and adding more convenient designs to meet this demand. They are moving toward quality.

Whether or not consumers receive the quality they demand, will depend largely on them. Comparison shopping, investigating alternatives, and recording expenditure are votes for quality and will help ensure that the marketplace responds to consumers.

Food Processor Class II and a learn-at-home free course, "The Working Family-Management at Home" series, were programs offered by the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/Virginia Cooperative Extension Service during 1986 National Consumer Week.

Always cast beyond target!

Spring is a time of peak fishin' fever. To take full advantage of the spring season, it pays to understand how bass behave in three distinct spring periods: pre-spawn, spawn, and post-spawn.

Generally speaking, the most important factors in reading these periods are water temperature, weed growth and the developing food chain.

Warming water temperature sets off the spawning instinct. Once the bass is done with the spawn, it wants to have a source of cover available where it can recuperate from its spawning frenzy and can exert little effort in catching prey. That's where weed growth comes in.

The penetration of sunlight is a key factor in the pre-spawn period. Some pros have dubbed this early cycle the "pre-spawn picnic" because of the ravenous feeding frenzy bass have at times. During this period bass school up, so the smart angler can also have a "picnic."

Where does one start fishing in spring?

"I would try the northwest side of the lake or cove that run northwest," says Randy Deaman of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff. "They'll be protected more from the north wind, and anglers won't have the wind blowing on them. The sun will shine on these waters longer. They should be the first pockets of warmth on the lake, so those would be where the fish would generally spawn first."

On the northwest side of the body of water, key in on rocks, rock piles, and other structures that absorb sunlight and, in turn, radiate that heat into the surrounding water. You can bet that bass will be snuggled up close to those "heaters."

As a general rule of thumb, the pre-spawn period comes when the water temperature is 48° to 58° (Fahrenheit). By asking around at bait and tackle shops, you can find out where the spawning beds are, and odds have it they'll be on the north or northwest side of the lake. If there is a temperature drop, bass move out from the shallow bedding area into deeper waters, but will come back up when there is a corresponding temperature rise. This is the best time to take a lot of bass with crankbaits, No. 7 Fat Raps and Series 600 Bombers.

When the water temperature reaches 58°, and until it exceeds 65°, there will be spawning. However, other factors affecting

by Tiny Foerster

spawning include bottom conditions and hormone levels. So, contrary to what some anglers think, all bass in a certain area don't spawn at the same time. Some spawn earlier, others later. At any given time in this temperature frame, you may have bass that are in the pre-spawn, spawn and post-spawn cycles, depending on their own biological clock.

Finally, the post-spawn period has a water temperature range of 65° to 68°—which is very narrow range. For the most part, bass are just "dead;" they don't bite and the big females are off in the depths recuperating.

Through the spring, no matter which of the periods you fish, the bass fisherman can have a heck of a lot of fun on ultra-light tackle. More likely than not, you will catch more small males and these can provide lots of entertainment when caught on 4-pound test line! Pros favor spinnerbaits, minnows on jigs, and Rapalas during this period. Another favorite in parts of the country is a weightless spawning rig—a fancy title for a zero-weight plastic worm on a hook rigged Texas-style (hook imbedded into the middle of the worm). Whatever you decide to use, be sure to maintain a slow retrieve.

Be sure to cast beyond your target. In the spawning period, bring the lure back toward the spawning bed, where you should let it agitate the bass guarding the bed. I generally feel that no harm comes to fish caught during this period if the bass is released so that it can renew its watch on the bed and safeguard the hatch from predators. This insures another generation of America's favorite gamefish.

the top step of a step ladder. Also, make sure the extension ladder is well anchored into the ground so it will not kick out from under you.

Even you, Virginia Beach professional firefighters have to do spring cleaning. For the next several months they will be testing over 100,000 feet of fire hose as well as painting and checking every fire hydrant in the city.

In my years of service I have witnessed each one of these hazards several times, so think fire safety when you do your spring cleaning.

Secret Place

By the seashore,

By the beach,

There is a place

only I can reach.

It's hidden by tall reeds and grasses,

And noone walks through,

runs, or passes.

with lots of trees,

And even sometimes

there is a breeze.

Once in a while

when the tide goes out,

I look for shells

as I walk about.

But just because it's

by the sea,

My secret place is just for me.

By Cary Blumenstein, president, Virginia Beach Education Association

Conventions brings us closer

Hundreds of professional educators from around the state will gather in Norfolk on May 8, 9 and 10 for the one-hundred and first Virginia Education Association Convention.

The members of Virginia Beach Education Association will be represented by more than 70 teachers, teacher aides and school psychologists. The annual convention is one of the highlights of the year for it is an opportunity for association leaders, elected by their fellow members in their home associations, to get together to work on issues of concern to us all.

Leaders will come to Norfolk from across the state of Virginia. They will travel from rural areas such as Bath, Fluvanna, Wytheville and Buchanan; from urban centers in Roanoke, Richmond, Fairfax and Hampton Roads; from the college towns of Williamsburg, Charlottesville, Radford and Madison; from Lunenburg, Botetourt, Gloucester and Tazewell; from Prince Edward, Prince George, Prince William and King and Queen. These educators will come to represent and share the ideas and concerns of themselves and their colleagues at home.

Old friends will be reacquainted and the discussions will be endless. They'll deal with concerns such as how to energize that gifted student in third bell history, what to do about that eighth grader who has just decided he's going to fail and what to do if a fight erupts in the classroom while the teacher is out on hall duty. They'll share ideas on lesson planning, teaching strategies, discipline and motivation. The convention becomes a learning session as well as an opportunity for professional growth.

The discussions will usually become more intense as the convention delegates begin to consider positions on the major issues that will affect students, the profession and public education now and in the future. Resolutions already slated to come before the delegate assembly this year deal with issues such as state funding of instructional positions, the new Beginning Teachers Assistance Program, education for children with special needs and potential health and chemical hazards. Action on new business items will be conducted daily and the variety of items which will be presented in this category will surely reflect the myriad of pressures affecting the education community today.

Attending the VEA convention increases an educator's sense of professionalism. Delegates to the convention set the policies and set the direction of the VEA for the coming year. They establish priorities and commit themselves to seeing their goals for the profession and public education realized. They'll return home and volunteer to work on committees, panels, advisory groups and in political campaigns to help elect friends of education to public office. They'll address school boards, city councils, boards of supervisors, PTAs and PTOs to enlist their aid in making public education the state's number one priority.

The members of the Virginia Education Association are caring professionals committed to working for the advancement of public education. Some words from the theme song of the National Education Association are perhaps the best way to express why Virginia educators take their time and energy and often make personal sacrifices to support their chosen profession:

Together we show them how.
We teach the children.
They're depending on us now.
We teach the children.
We'll show them what we care.
You've got to face life with an education, and the Rev. Dr. A. Barnett Thoroughgood.

What makes the campaign a little different this year is the presence of a ticket of five candidates known as the Team for Responsible Leadership. The members of the ticket agree that they share the same basic philosophy but differ in other respects. The reason for forming a ticket, they say, is economics. It was the best way they could get enough money together to run. The ticket is backed by Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf, who is not running this year, and supported by Henley.

Often the four incumbents are lumped together by the voters because all are running independent campaigns and do not consider themselves bound to the other incumbents.

Pungo Borough

Barbara M. Henley is running for her third four-year term on Council. Although she is unopposed she has attended all the forums, as she said she would, and can't remember that there were as many—three to four a week—in other campaigns. Meetings are scheduled on Monday nights, a Council meeting day.

She sees as the primary issues growth and leadership. She said that the candidates all seem to say the same thing so that it is difficult for the people to figure out where the differences lie. Of the ticket, she said that it is hard to run a credible campaign without funds and pooling resources was the only way the candidates could do it.

Henley said she enjoys answering questions and addressing issues, but doesn't "enjoy nasty, planted questions."

Henley, a former teacher and graduate of Princess Anne High School and Old Dominion University, noted that the campaign will be over in time for the strawberry picking season at her Pungo farm.

Lynnhaven Borough

Albert W. Balko, a retired planner, coordinator and expeditor for the Bell system, says he is running hard. He said he is running a positive campaign on the basis of problem solving and sees the issues as roads, schools and water. He is also interested in the preservation of the Back Bay water shed, the Southeastern Expressway, which he thinks will take the pressure off of other city roads, and broadening the tax base with more industry.

Balko also favors a water filtration plant for Virginia Beach which he thinks should be totally self-sufficient.

Balko has been active in his civic-league and is a member of the Planning Commission which he headed in 1984. He said that he is not aligned with anyone and that the idea of a coalition "scared me."

He deplored advertising which has been rejected by the media which ridiculed the Team, and said that he hates "to see that type of mudslinging."

Walter Vargo, who has 24 years service in the Navy and 18 years in the Civil Service as a budget officer at Little Creek behind him, is a first-time candidate. He has served as president of both the Council of Civic Organizations and the Citizens Action Coalition. He has served on the Mayor's Sewer and Water Bond Referendum Committee, and on the Virginia Beach Tomorrow Steering Commission among other community activities.

Vargo said the city is in trouble financially and believes Virginia Beach Tomorrow will recommend drastic steps.

He said the response from the citizens has been great. He said that the Team is doing so well, that backers of other candidates are "running scared."

He said that he has found that a group like the Fraternal Order of Police, who would be expected to be parochial in interests, are interested in city-wide issues.

Of the Team, he said that they differ on a lot of things. Some voted one way in the past and others in another way, and this difference will continue, he said. They mainly got together for economic reasons, he said.

Bayside

For Louis R. Jones, former mayor, it's his second Councilmanic campaign. He said the challengers are probably more negative in their approach to campaigning, primarily the Team, which makes the campaign distasteful.

He said, however, that his reception by the public has been good and that he is running what he considers a positive campaign, sticking to issues, staying away from personalities and talking about "what I think is important to the city."

Jones, who owns a chain of undertaking establishments, said that people see as important, roads, fiscal responsibility, controlled orderly growth and water. The people, he said, have been orderly, receptive and very calm in their questioning. He said that the opposition has continued to try to stir up the public but has failed.

He said his second campaign should be less expensive than his first because he already has name identification. "I think I'm going to win," he said.

He said that people assess the positions, attitudes and ability of a candidate to do the job based on the personality he or she projects, he said. Just being a nice person isn't enough.

Jones finds the current campaign less demanding than his last because as an incumbent, he said, he is more familiar with the issues and has more information available than does a beginner.

John L. Perry, one of two blacks running in the race and a member of the Team, said that "so far our campaign is going over well." People are interested in issues, he said, and personalities did not enter into the campaign at all until the ads (which were later cancelled by the newspapers) came out in the paper.

The campaign is not as hectic as it could be because the union of the five candidates put less of a financial strain on the candidates. In the same race four years ago when Perry came in second in a field of four running for the Bayside seat, he said he spent $16,000.

He welcomes the forums as a means to say what you want, but the audiences often have people who have attended other forums. He's concerned with schools, roads, water and the quality of life, and noted that four years ago, the city had 213 outhouses. Now it has 108 which means that the city is getting rid of outhouses at the rate of 25 a year. "That's sad,"

Perry, who spent most of his life teaching, questions the way Community Development funds have been spent in Virginia Beach.

As it is now, he said, people can't see the light at the end of the tunnel. "Anything is better than what we've got."

Kempsville Borough

Dr. J. Henry McCoy, Jr., a dentist and former vice mayor (1978-80) and mayor (1980-82), is the old-timer in the campaign. This is his fourth campaign, and he said, the toughest. He said there is more unrest in the city and cited the unsuccessful bond referendums a year ago. He sees as the number one issue the roads and the traffic generated by growth. He said that it is the first time there has been a ticket in Virginia Beach in a number of years.

Instead of running against one person, he said, "it feels like you're running against five." The campaign is full of more animosity than in past campaigns, but he said that the candidates running against the ticket are not responsible for the ads which came out against the ticket. "I hate to see a campaign get into that," he said.

McCoy said more forums are scheduled this time than ever

Armchair explorers take note

It's easy for Virginia Beach residents to be armchair explorers these days; we can sit in our comfortable homes and watch "Nova," "National Geographic," or "Jacques Cousteau" and feel as if we're swimming with dolphins or watching the mountain gorilla in his leafy home.

Without moving from our seats, we can instantly travel from the swamps of Hampton Roads to the plains of Africa to observe the actions of carnivorous plants, seeing in seconds processes that may take hours in the wild. These popular documentaries let us observe flora and fauna in natural settings with only the flip of the dial.

Interest in natural history was just as keen 100 years ago as it is now, but the focus was on collecting rather than observation. Clergymen encouraged their parishioners to engage in the wholesome pastime of nature study, an activity suitable for both Victorian ladies and gentlemen. Young ladies could contemplate the glories of God's creation as they collected butterflies and pressed flowers. Gentlemen also collected specimens, usually as part of their hunting activities. Since the point of this collecting fervor was to have a large collection, the hunters often shot anything that moved, had it stuffed, and added it to their personal museums. Some enthusiasts were more systematic, attempting to collect an example of each of the indigenous butterflies or every sparrow in their county. Then as now, naturalists who could afford it went wherever they thought they might find interesting specimens.

Clare Lloyd's The Travelling Naturalists tells the stories of nineteenth-century British naturalists who ventured throughout the world in pursuit of adventure and biological specimens. Lloyd illustrates her narrative both with the woodcuts and drawings of the explorers and with excerpts from their diaries and other publications. We seek the source of the Nile with John Speke and travel from Peru on the west coast of South America, over the Andes, and down the Amazon to the Atlantic with Henry Bates. With Leopold McClintock we search the Arctic for the fate of Sir John Franklin's expedition seeking the Northwest Passage. McClintock was a multi-talented capable administrator as well as a meticulous naturalist. During his winters marooned in Arctic ice, he devised efficient methods of travel on the snow and pastimes which kept his men active and healthy, while observing and drawing the few animals and plants in the Arctic before collecting them for the stewpot.

Travel was difficult, though not impossible, for women under nineteenth-century constraints of propriety. Georgian and Victorian clothing was unsuitable for climbing mountains, wading in freezing streams, or riding horses astride. "The layers of clothing made vigorous activity dangerous in tropical climates. Travelers, men and women, were reluctant to alter their dress lest they be accused of 'going native.' Such an accusation would adversely affect their credibility and ability to obtain the lecture fees which often helped finance subsequent expeditions.

World traveler Isabella Bird, when accused of adopting male attire for convenience, published drawings of herself in her riding outfit, a modest dress over trousers. Mary Kingsley, indefatigable collector in Africa, also wore trousers with a skirt over them. This outfit actually saved her life when she fell 15 feet into a game trap studded with 12-inch spikes. She remarked, "It is at times like these you realize the blessings of a good skirt."

Lloyd's slim volume is only a glimpse into the lives and travels of these Victorianists, but her bibliography, including the journals of the travelers, plus secondary sources makes it possible to learn more about these fascinating naturalists.

Virginia Beach District's driving team recently took third place in the first annual Hampton Roads Buckle-Up Safetython, winning a color TV.

The competition, sponsored by McDonald's, the Hampton Roads Traffic Safety Specialists Association and Virginia Auto Safety Alliance, consisted of gathering pledges to buckle-up, driving skills tests, written tests, and a safety clue maze.

Virginia Beach Junior Women's Club presents books to libraries

The Virginia Beach Junior Women's Club presented copies of the book Corduroy by Don Freeman, to all the branches of the Virginia Beach Public Library during the recent National Library Week.

In presenting these books, Barbara Harlin, representing the Virginia Beach Junior Women's Club, said "we are continually impressed with the courteous and helpful service given to all by our local librarians; an abundance of interesting and informative programs are available to everyone throughout the year; the children's storyhours are of particular interest to our club as most of us have small children."

Mrs. Harlin read Corduroy to children at the Great Neck Area Library as part of the presentation. For more information contact Mary K. Chelton at 427-4321.

Teen car clinic offered

A car maintenance clinic designed just for teenagers will be held at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center/Kempsville on Wednesday, May 2 from 6 to 8 p.m. It will offer basic instruction on keeping an automobile running smoothly. Chinese paintings on silk at Humana Gallery from May 2-June 2

Watercolor paintings on silk by Virginia Beach artist Shaw-mei Shen will be on view from Friday, May 2 through Monday, June 2, at the Humana Gallery, a satellite space for art sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center.

The gallery is located in the dining area of Bayside Humana Hospital at 800 Independence Blvd. The gallery, free and open to the public, is open Monday through Saturday, 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Shaw-mei Shen, born in China, studied with the great Chinese art masters, as well as in Taiwanese and American universities. She received a bachelor's degree in fine arts from Baylor University. Her work is a rare mixture of classic Chinese imagery and contemporary watercolor style. Each work is delicately rendered on silk with careful intent to depict the most subtle colors, shapes and forms in nature.

In a review of her work in The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star, Robert Trotter wrote, "If a single word were used to describe Shaw-mei Shen's art it would have to be grace. Her art is designed with rare skill and is subtly crafted to bring us squarely into focus with the beauty of nature. Yet, it leaves ample room for the imagination."

The nine paintings on view are celebratory visions of nature, including many traditional Chinese themes. The exhibition will be on view through June 2 at the Humana Gallery. For further information, please contact the Virginia Beach Arts Center at 425-0000.

before, about 17 and 18, and "no one would dare miss one." People are primarily interested in the roads, traffic, how the money will be raised. He said some support increasing the bond indebtedness and some support increasing by referendum only. He said he's seen a lot of support for directly-elected mayors.

McCoy plans to spend more money this year. In 1974 he spent $15,000 but managed to do more with less money because of the lower costs, he said.

He is interested in getting all the voters out to vote. He said that many people think they are supposed to vote only for the borough candidates.

McCoy served on the Old Dominion Board of Visitors for eight years and on Tidewater Community College Board for four years. He also has represented the city on the Tidewater Regional Transit Authority for 12 years.

F. Tom Holland, a clerk with the Norfolk and Western Railway, figures the forums have numbered about 30 counting the borough forums. This is his third try for a Council seat, but in both 1982 and 1984 he ran for an at-large seat. Holland's civic activities include the Wetlands Board, the Board of Directors of the Council of Civic Organizations, the Neptune Festival, the Kiwanis Club, and the Virginia Beach Life Underwriters Association.

The present campaign, he said, is much more demanding than previous campaigns. Running independently, he said, he has to spend more and it does take money to get the exposure. He said that the people of Kempville have a clear-cut choice.

Holland said he has no professional handling his campaign, and his campaign office is his home.

His goal, he said, is to see a new Council and he thinks he's the one who can see that this happens. He said that he is not a candidate who will cry foul play if he ends up as a minority on an issue.

He said that the main issues are roads, water and schools. Holland said he has noticed a great amount of anti-incumbent feeling and a sharpness on the part of the electorate. Holland favors innovative financing but insists the city's borrowing authority first. He would also go along with direct election of the mayor but would want the election in November when the turnout is greater.

John Moss, 32, is the youngest candidate. He's a member of the Team for Responsible Leadership and is a first-time candidate. He's not new to politics, however, and has worked on campaigns for Oberdorff, Henley and Steve Del. Owens Pickett. Moss is very pleased with the campaign and the grass roots financing has gone very well, he said.

People are generally interested in roads and water, he said, and in rezoning, such as those along Baxter Road and Princess Anne Road. The people in Sandbridge are interested in beach replenishment.

This campaign differs with others, he said, in the intensity of candidate forums where the turnout has been a little bit higher. He said something has been scheduled almost every night since the beginning of April.

He said that the overwhelming majority of the people think that the coalition is a good idea and that the high cost of a campaign makes a coalition a necessity. He said that a campaign is too expensive to run independently without taking money from a political action committee. As for campaign offices, he said the Team has five—the homes of the candidates. All of the campaign money is spent on media, brochures, and advertising.

The campaign has been more fun than Moss had thought it would be—"it's like a superbowl every night," and the competition is good for the voters.

Moss has been on the Council of Civic Organizations Board of Directors, and on the Citizens Action Coalition. Professionally he does industrial engineering studies on Navy activities for the Navy Manpower Engineering Center.

He said he would not be so pompous as to say he is going to win—it's for the people to decide, but that he would run the best campaign possible. It's a tight race, he said.

At-Large

Robert G. Jones, who has a doctorate and a law degree, lives in the Lynnhaven Borough where he also practices law. This is his second bid for an at-large Council seat.

Jones said he has tried to run a "very positive upbeat campaign," but distinguishes this campaign from his last in that it has had so much negativity. "Nobody has developed any good feeling,"

The public, he said, seems apathetic and the forums, in comparison to those in the last election, do not attract as many people and are drab affairs. People have tried to label the incumbents as a group, "but that certainly is not the case," said Jones. "I consider myself very independent."

He said the campaign has been difficult to raise money. The hidden expense of good government, he said, but most are not inclined to make a minimum contribution.

He said that the national average for campaign funds is one dollar for each voter which in Virginia Beach would come to $37,000 or $40,000.

Jones said that he doesn't sense a broad consensus on the issues and attributes apathy on the relative comfort of the Virginia Beach economy. As it is, he said that people must spend about 15 minutes thinking about the Councilman election. He said that the direct election of mayor would boost the interest because the mayor would be one person who personifies leadership. Jones' slogan is "Real Leadership," and he is confident of reelection.

Nancy Parker, a member of the Planning Commission, is running for elective office for the first time. She has served as recording secretary of the Council of Civic Organizations, president of the Council of Civic Organizations for the Marine Science Museum, and on the Virginia Beach Beautification Commission. She resides in the Beach Borough.

As a candidate this year, she may have a different perspective, she said, but the campaign seems to be more intense. A member of the Team, she said she likes when people stick to voting records or issues.

The key issue of the campaign, she said, is opening the land for development south of the Green Line. But if the city does allow this, she said, money to provide services in these new areas would be siphoned off from the older areas.

She said that the $50 to $60 million raised by interests outside the campaign to oppose the team is nothing compared to the benefits the growth advocates would receive.

She said the people ask intelligent questions, are informed and enlightened and that the campaign has been a real eye opener. She said the five candidates on the ticket are five individuals with minds of their own.

The present system just is not working, she said, or "you wouldn't have a backlog in the city services."

She said that she is optimistic about the campaign and the feedback is all positive.

Fred Board is a facilities planner and estimator for the Norfolk Naval Shipyard. This is his first try at elective office.

A resident of the Chesapeake Beach area of the BaySide Borough, Board lists three among the best of the forums—Bow Creek, Inlandview and the Principals and Administrators forum at Green Run High School. These meetings had the greatest variety of people. Ordinarily, he said, the same people seem to be at each meeting with maybe 15 to 20 new people.

Board said the basic issues are the Green Line, schools, roads. The people feel, he said, that no matter what they think, they do not like being overridden by Council.

Board is expecting grassroots support from citizens in a city where he has lived all his life except for three years in the Caribbean. He said that he is running on issues and believes that the city will definitely see some changes.

The talk from the people is that they don't like the way the job's been done, Board said. He is opposed to teams running. "Throw out one team and put in another...Teams haven't solved anything."

Board said that his chances are as good as any. In telephone surveys he has made himself he appears among the top five, he said.

Gerald M. Johnson, a BaySide Borough resident, said that when he started campaigning he was opposed to what he termed "the Oberdorff Team." But his opposition since has gone in the other direction, to what he calls the "(Mayor Harold) Heischorff Team." He said the Council has consistently voted for higher densities leading to crowded schools and a strain on the city's water supply. He said that ad prepared ridiculing the team were "juvenile tactics." "I don't even believe we will have a Conflict of Interest law when politicians are making the laws. Developers are making outrageous profits and when they do not get their way, they sue the city and that's us."

This is the first campaign for Johnson who is a field engineer for General Electric in Norfolk. He said he had never spoken before a group before. Anyone for high density opposes him, he said.

His campaign funds are low, he explained, because he is representing the people and "when you represent the people you don't have money."

He said he is still learning, but that he has learned enough to be a good Council member if elected. The only people that are representing the citizens now, he said, are three women.

On their way to the polls, the voters will see expensive signs and think they are the people to vote for. He said that usually at forums candidates are given two or three minutes to give a speech. He would like five times as much time, he said. "I have done my homework."

Capt. Danny J. Michaels, former commanding officer at the Naval Air Station, Oceana, is trying for an at-large seat for the second time. In 1982 when he ran, his campaign was limited because he was still on active duty, but about to retire.

Michaels is chairman of the Virginia Beach Crime Solvers, past chairman of the Virginia Beach Advisory Board, United Way, and on the executive committee of the Greater Hampton Roads United Way. He has also been active in the Rotary and the Chamber of Commerce, and was King Neptune VII. After leaving the Navy he received his certificate as a professional planner from Old Dominion University.

He also is a past member of the Mayor's Transportation Committee and served on the schools Curriculum Study Task Force.

He said that he is spending more money on his campaign this time $15,000 to $20,000 made up of a lot of little $50 bills. He is also contributing some of his personal funds to the campaign.

Michaels said he is for the guy on the street and has stressed leadership rather than issues in his campaign. He said he believes in compromise and bargaining for the good of the community and in a good long-range plan and goals and objectives with strategies to get there. He has also served on the steering committee of the Virginia Beach Tomorrow Committee.

From the questions asked at the forums, Michaels believes the key issues are the erosion of the beaches and transportation.

U.S. "Sam" Myers, a member of the Team for Responsible Leadership, ran as a candidate for the Beach Borough in 1984 when he lost to Robert Fentress.

He believes he has good grassroots support and finds a big difference between running with a team and running independently. He said that mostly the difference is good because people are ready for something like this, and "there is not a lot of confidence and credibility in Council." "(The people) don't want business as usual."

Although he was away from his hometown of Virginia Beach for 27 years while in the Air Force, Myers, jumped right into community activities when he returned. He was president of the Council of Civic Organizations for the Marine Science Museum, vice chairman of the Historical Review Board, and served on the Virginia Beach Tomorrow Committee. He also served in his local civic league and was on board of the CCO.

He said he has found that the intensity of interest is higher and that the citizens are more alert to the issues. He believes that the team effort has stirred up a lot of interest, especially during the last week or so.

One of the major interests of the voters is density, he said. It does no good to keep building roads and voting for higher and higher density, he said. The people have responded, but the Council majority has not gotten the message yet, he said.

Myers said he also has concerns about the Conflict of Interest issue and other ethical matters.

L. M. "Lou" Pace is a salesman for Curtis Industries from the Princess Anne Borough. He said at the start of the campaign that he wasn't going to spend any money and he hasn't, unless the gas driving to and from the forums counts. He has no signs, posters and brochures, no newspaper ads or radio or TV spots. He does have a sign in his yard with one of his slogans: "A vote for Lou Pace makes sense." Fortunately he lives on London Bridge Road so that a lot of people get to see the sign.

Some of his other slogans, which he makes up as he goes along, are: "Push 64 on May 6," "You'll have Lou working for you," "A vote for Lou counts for you."

Pace got interested in city government when the Brown Farm came up for rezoning. The zoning was approved by Council. He thinks that the city should have a plan for growth and live by it. Growth has to be slowed down, he said, so that the city can get roads, schools and water.

He said that he preferred the people at forums to stand up and ask their own questions. At one forum cards were handed out so that people could write down their questions. One of the questions came back typewritten, he said.

With higher density zoning at his front door, Pace got interested in community activities and served on the board of directors of his civic association and is on the board of directors of the CCO.

"I'm going to win," he said, adding that it was "lucky I was with them (the other candidates) or they wouldn't have had any fun at all."

The Rev. Dr. A. Barnett Thoroughgood, a candidate from the Lynnhaven Borough, has name identification in certain areas, such as Community Development, but he realized that he would have to spend more money for his campaign than average to become known throughout the city. But he said that he has been fortunate in raising money, has a strong campaign committee and each day receives some response from letters and brochures. For Thoroughgood it comes down to "Do you want people to know who you are or don't you?"

People are ready for good leadership and good government, he said, and in addition to his concerns about roads, water, community development and schools, his platform includes the elderly.

Thoroughgood, who is the second black candidate in the campaign, his first is for "directed" growth rather than controlled growth. He believes growth should be decided by a coalition of city leaders, landowners and the developers and that the comprehensive land use plan should be re-evaluated.

He said that some thought should be given to maintaining existing housing or to replacing it, or the city will end up with slums.

Thoroughgood has served on the Citizens Advisory Committee for Community Development since the early 1970's, as president of the Seatack Civic League, and as a member of the Review Board for the Department of Agriculture.

He said that he does not get into any kind of campaign spats and is running a high-road campaign, sticking to the issues and offering some kind of leadership on how they should be solved.

He said he has been assured of support across the board. His supporters have raised money from concerts to church services.

Of the campaign, he said, it is one of the most invigorating and educational experiences he has ever had. He said he has been to places he normally would not be.

Habitat discussed at Back Bay

Kathy Zeamer, an outdoor recreation planner for the Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge, will present "A View of Back Bay—An Introduction to Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge" on Wednesday, May 7, at 7 p.m. in the Great Neck Area Library, 1251 Bayne Drive.

Zeamer will discuss the different habitat forms found in the refuge, the various management programs, the wildlife refuge in general and the public use opportunities that are available. She will also show slides taken in the refuge and answer any questions participants may have. Advance registrations need to be placed. To register or learn more about this program, call the library at 481-6094.

2 missing children found at Beach

Two missing children were recently located in Virginia Beach, according to Child Find, Inc., New York.

According to Child Find, on March 31, 1986, Charles Sly, 7, and Emily Sly, 3, of Seattle, Washington, were located in Virginia Beach after being identified through "investigative procedures."

The search took seven months.

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING ON PROPOSED CHANGES TO PERSONAL PROPERTY TAX COMPUTATION

The city is considering a proposal to change the levy on personal property taxes from $6.00 to $3.80 per $100 of assessed value in conjunction with a change in the computation of assessed value from 50% to 100% of market value. Since a change in the definition of market value will also occur with the proposal, the amount of levy to be paid by most citizens will be the same as that with the $6.00 rate.

A public hearing will be held on the May 12, 1986 council meeting at 2:00 p.m. to solicit public comment on the proposed changes. ALL interested parties are invited to be present at the time and place aforementioned. City Council shall permit persons desiring to be heard an opportunity to present oral testimony within such reasonable time limits as shall be determined by City Council. Individuals desiring to provide oral comment should register with the City Clerk's Office before the hearing. The City Clerk may be contacted at the office on the second floor of the City Hall Building or by calling 427-4303.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The Virginia Beach Planning Commission will hold a Public Hearing on Tuesday, May 13, 1985 at 12:00 Noon in the Council Chambers of the City Hall Building, Princess Anne Courthouse, Virginia Beach, Virginia. A briefing session will be held at 9:00 a.m. in the Planning Department Conference Room, Operations Building, Planning Commission. Final determination of the application, but only a recommendation to the City Council as the viewpoint of the Planning Commission. Final determination of the application is to be made by City Council at a later date, after public notice in a newspaper having general circulation within the city.

Those members of the public interested in attending the Public Hearing should be advised that, for reasons the Planning Commission deems appropriate, certain items on the agenda may be heard out of order and that it should not be assumed that the order listed below will be exactly followed during the Public Hearing.

The staff reviews of some or all of the items on this agenda suggest that certain conditions be attached to approval by City Council. However, it should not be assumed that those conditions constitute all the conditions that will ultimately be attached to the project. Staff agencies may impose further conditions and requirements during administrative review of applicable city ordinances.

Council in middle of dog fight

By Lee Cahill
 City Council Reporter

Are dogs and people compatible? Some Virginia Beach residents think they are only when the dogs are on a leash. Others like to give their dogs some freedom.

The City Council once again finds itself in the middle with the proposal of an amendment to the city's leash law which would include all the public beaches in the city.

More than an hour was spent discussing the pros and cons Monday evening until Council deferred the matter for two weeks. The reason? To determine the city's liability if the ordinance remains as it is now written excluding the public beaches from the leash law.

At present it is unlawful for the owner of any dog to permit the dog to go on a public street, sidewalk, or right-of-way, excluding the public beaches, unless the dog is kept secured by a leash or lead or other means of restraints.

The City Code also prohibits dogs from being on the beach in North Virginia Beach from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. during the months of May 15 through Sept. 30. Dogs are allowed during the daytime in other months of the year. During the winter months and in the evening and early morning hours of these summer months, a dog is allowed on the beach without a leash.

Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. said that many Council members inquired "whether I had lost my insanity by proposing this," he said he is not against dogs, has one of his own, but he has received numerous calls from his constituents in the Lynnhaven Borough where 60 percent of the open beach areas of the city are located.

He said one resident was attacked by a dog and others are intimidated by dogs roaming wild at night. He said the remains of the dog's night roaming are on the beach the next day.

About one hour into the discussion by proponents and opponents of the change, Councilman Louis R. Jones asked whether the city would incur liability if it knowingly excluded something from a code, such as excluding the beaches.

City Attorney Dale Bimson said his comment was valid and seven of the ten Council members present considered the question worthy of consideration leading to a two-week deferral. Dissenting from the vote were Councilmen John A. Baum, Robert G. Jones, and Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. Councilwoman Nancy Creech was absent.

In the motion, Bimson also was instructed to prepare another ordinance incorporating a suggestion made by Jennings to make it more palatable to all the people. He suggested that the law continue as it is now except that during the summer months the dogs must be on a leash on public right-of-way and public beaches at all times.

Dogs are prohibited, in any event, from the beach along the resort strip.

Objecting to the change in ordinance was William Harris, of 110 44th Street, and Bruce Murphy, later as an expert attorney in the defense of dog bite cases.

Harris said that many people are afraid of dogs, including his wife, and pointed out that at a time when the city has had difficulty obtaining liability insurance, the leash law would be considered by an insurance company as a safety measure. "Some young, smart lawyer will sue the city," he said, and the jury is mighty mad when faced by a child who has been injured by a dog.

He said there are cases where not only the municipality was involved, but the individual Council members.

Murphy said that a North End pressure group, not the civic association, got the exemption four years ago. The exemption has aided in the desecration of the beaches with dog feces. He said the change was needed to reduce the number of dog bites, to protect the little dogs from the big dogs, and to encourage the dog owners to clean up. "They are more likely to clean up if the feces are just six feet away."

He said that last summer of officers issued 283 citations at the beach for dog ordinance violations.

Lillian Sills of 86th Street, opposed the change. She said that complaints have been minimal and the change would be difficult to enforce creating a burden for the Animal Control Bureau. "Our pets are not vicious," she said, and she has never encountered a vicious dog on the beach. "How would the leash law solve the feces problem?", she asked.

Jack Stokes said he exercised his wife's dogs every morning on the beach. "She has a little Doberman," he said. He said the beach is not littered as has been implied. The beach is a vacation area and is supposed to be enjoyed. "If you don't have children, dogs are a part of the family."

Councilman Robert G. Jones said that the issue was the convenience of walking the public and the convenience of dog owners. As for liability, he said, all you need is one case. He said he could foresee some plaintiff's attorney using the discussion that night in a case against the city.

Stokes, who is a lawyer, conceded that the city had a problem.

Jones said that right now the city is under a considerable insurance burden and would stand a substantial risk.

Jennings said that the staff research of ten beach areas along the East Coast shows that six allow no dogs on the beach at any time, two, only out of season and on a leash, and two permit them year-round provided they are on a leash.

L. Jones said he would rather address the legal problem.

Councilman John A. Baum said that more restrictions are applied as the beach gets more crowded.

Vice Mayor Reba McClanahan said that she did not think Council should discuss its legal liability in public.

Boys Club presents awards

The Boys Club of Virginia Beach recently observed its annual Spring Awards Night as part of its Boys Club Week celebration.

Over 200 awards were presented to the boys and volunteers.

Donnie Hensley and David Pearman were awarded the Co-Volunteers of the Year Award. The "Tigers," "Knights," and "Knicks" were honored as champs of their basketball leagues. Robert Morgan, Mike Wilson and Chris Newsome were honored as most valuable player of their basketball league. Mike Wilson received the Sir Thomas J. Lipton Award for sportsmanship, leadership, and integrity within the Boys Club.

The Youth of the Year award, the most prestigious award the Boys Club offer, was awarded to Dean Moser, a sophomore at Princess Anne High School.
